

Carroll, Mitchell
Aristotle's poetics,
C. XXV

PA
3893
P5C3
1895
c. 1
ROBA

ARISTOTLE'S POETICS, C. XXV,

IN THE

Light of the Homeric Scholia,

BY

MITCHELL CARROLL.

+

THESIS

ACCEPTED FOR THE DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY,

JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY,

MAY, 1893.

+

BALTIMORE:

JOHN MURPHY & CO.,

1895.

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2006 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

ARISTOTLE'S POETICS, C. XXV,

IN THE

Light of the Homeric Scholia,

BY

MITCHELL CARROLL.

+

THESIS

ACCEPTED FOR THE DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY,

JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY,

MAY, 1893.

+

BALTIMORE :
JOHN MURPHY & CO.,
1895.

3132
27/10/90-

ARISTOTELIS POLITICA. C. XXV.

Eight of the Elements of the

NATIONAL LIBRARY

1882

1882

1882

1882

8182
27/10/90

TO MY FATHER.

οὐχ ἡ αὐτὴ ὀρθότης
ἔστιν τῆς πολιτικῆς καὶ τῆς ποιητικῆς οὐδὲ ἄλλης τέχνης καὶ ποιητικῆς.

Ar. Poet., c. xxv, 1460 b 13-15.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE.
ARISTOTLE AND THE EARLY CRITICISM OF HOMER,	9
ANALYSIS OF POETICS, C. XXV.
I. General Propositions, respecting
A. The objects of representation,	17
B. The means of representation,	17
C. The standard of correctness in poetry,	18
II. The Ἐπιτιμήματα.
I. ὡς ἀδύνατα,	19
II. ὡς ἔλογα,	20
III. ὡς βλαβερά,	21
IV. ὡς ὑπεραντία,	21
V. ὡς παρὰ τὴν ἠρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τέχνην,	23
(a). τὸ ἀνόμαλον,	24
(b). τὸ ἀπρεπές,	25
III. The Λύσεις.
A. Λύσεις from a consideration of artistic correctness.
I. The End of Poetry,	28
II. The Accidental,	29
B. Λύσεις from a consideration of the objects of imitation.
III. Poetic Truth,	30
IV. Current Legends and Popular Belief,	31
V. Real Events or Custom,	31
Περὶ δὲ τοῦ καλῶς ἢ μὴ καλῶς, κ. τ. λ.,	33
(a). Ἐκ τοῦ προσώπου,	38
(b). Ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ,	39
C. Λύσεις from a consideration of the means of representation.
VI. γλώττη,	41
VII. κατὰ μεταφορὰν,	42
VIII. κατὰ προσφθίαν,	45
IX. διαιρέσει,	46
X. ἀμφιβολία,	48
XI. κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως,	48
XII. ποσαχῶς ἂν σημῆνυει οἱ δμωνυμία,	51
IV. Observations on Ἐπιτιμήματα and Λύσεις,	55

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

The authorities and editions most frequently consulted in the preparation of this paper are the following:

GENERAL WORKS.

1. DINDORF (W.). Scholia Graeca in Homeri Iliadem, I-IV. Oxford, 1875 ff.
2. DINDORF (W.). Scholia Graeca in Homeri Odysseam, I-II. Oxford, 1855.
3. SCHRADER (H.). Porphyrii Quaestionum Homericarum ad Iliadem pertinentium Reliquiae. Leipzig, 1880.
4. SCHRADER (H.). Porphyrii Quaestionum Homericarum ad Odysseam pertinentium Reliquiae. Leipzig, 1890.
5. WOLF (F. A.). Prolegomena ad Homerum. ed. Peppmüller, Halle, 1884.
6. SENGEBUSCH (M.). Dissertationes Homericae. Leipzig, 1855.
7. LEHR'S (K.). De Aristarchi Studiis Homericis. ed. tert. Leipzig, 1882.

SPECIAL WORKS ON ARISTOTLE.

1. ROSE (V.). Aristoteles Pseudepigraphus. Leipzig, 1863.
2. HEITZ (E.). Die verlorenen Schriften des Aristoteles. Leipzig, 1865.
3. PRANTL (K.). Ueber die Probleme des Aristoteles. Abh. d. Münch. Akad., 1851.
4. TEICHMÜLLER (G.). Aristotelische Forschungen, I, II. Halle, 1867.
5. RÖMER (A.). Die Homercitate und die Homerischen Fragen des Aristoteles. Sitzb. d. Bai. Akad., 1884.
6. TWINING (T.). Aristotle's Treatise on Poetry, I-II. London, 1812.
7. RITTER (FR.). Aristotelis Poetica. Cologne, 1839.
8. VAHLEN (J.). Beiträge zu Aristoteles Poetik. Vienna, 1865.
9. VAHLEN (J.). Aristotelis De Arte Poetica. Berlin, 1874.
10. BUTCHER (S. H.). Aristotle's Theory of Poetry and Fine Art. London, 1895.

ARISTOTLE'S POETICS, C. XXV,

IN THE

LIGHT OF THE HOMERIC SCHOLIA.

After his treatment of Tragedy and Epos in the Poetics, Aristotle adds, in chapter XXV, a special section which treats of objections brought by critics against poetry and the principles on which they are to be answered. The presence of such a chapter is peculiarly appropriate, as it is the object of the Poetics to teach not only the nature of poetry, but also the right criticism of poetic works. Yet it has given rise to any amount of misunderstanding among editors and commentators. Some have gone so far as to deny its genuineness, as Ritter and Susemihl¹; and while it has usually been accepted as Aristotelian, only Vahlen and Butcher can be said to have recognized the intimate relation it bears to the rest of the Poetics: and even their observations frequently show a narrow perspective, because of a limited knowledge of the range of poetic problems and the methods of solving them.

The faulty interpretation of many doubtful passages of this chapter, and the mistaken views as to its purport and importance, have been due to a lack of appreciation of its intimate relation to the Porphyrian ζητήματα of the Homeric scholia, of which the προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά of Aristotle and his followers were a fruitful source. The design of the προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά was to consider and answer the criticisms and censures of Homer by philosophers and sophists—an aim similar to that of the chapter under consideration—and the fragments preserved to us, more extensive, perhaps, than has heretofore been recognized, furnish numerous illustrations of the principles briefly stated in the Poetics. It is the object of this paper to make a study of Poetics, c. xxv, in the light of the Porphyrian scholia. But before entering upon the treatment proper, it is necessary to trace the early manifestations of Homeric criticism, to show Aristotle's interest in the same, and to indicate Porphyry's indebtedness to Aristotle and his followers.

¹Ritter (Comm. ad Poet., p. 265) thinks that the chapter has intruded improperly and absurdly, being added by some follower of Aristotle who was deeply versed in poetic προβλήματα. Susemihl (Gesch. d. Griech. Litt. in d. Alex. Zeit., I, p. 164, Anm. 847) characterizes it as 'ein peripatetischer Schulzusatz.'

ARISTOTLE AND THE EARLY CRITICISM OF HOMER.

The Homeric Question was playing a rôle prior to the rise of scientific criticism, in the fifth century B. C., in the days of the philosophers and sophists. The philosophers rebelled against the Homeric representations of the gods. Xenophanes,¹ for instance, accused Homer (and Hesiod) of ascribing to the gods everything

ὄσσα παρ' ἀνθρώποισιν ὀνείδεα καὶ ψόγος ἐστίν, κλέπτειν, μοιχεύειν τε καὶ ἀλλήλους ἀπατεύειν.

Herakleitos,² the contemporary of Xenophanes, is quoted as saying that Homer (and Archilochos) deserved to be scourged; and Plato, on grounds of morality, banished Homer and other poets from his ideal Republic. The early defenders of the poet against the philosophers sought refuge in allegorical interpretation.

¹ Mullach, Xenoph., fr. 7.

² Diog. La., ix, I, 1.

The sophists¹ and rhetoricians censured Homer, not for impiety in mythology, but for errors in grammar and diction. In their rhetorical displays treating of Homeric themes they would object to certain passages as faulty in expression or doubtful in meaning, and strive to detect incongruities in thought and language. Such discussions had as their object not so much the gaining of an accurate knowledge of the poet, as an exhibition of sophistic dialectic and rhetorical elegance of diction. Protagoras,² for example, censured Homer because he had invoked the muse unbecomingly by using the imperative mood; in Plato's dialogue (Hippias Minor) Hippias is represented discussing with Sokrates the words and actions of Homeric heroes; and Gorgias and Prodikos and other sophists treated in similar fashion various Homeric themes. The best known type of this class was Zoilos³ of Amphipolis, who won for himself, through his Homeric activity, the designation 'Ομηρομάστιξ. His strictures on the poet were embraced, most probably, in works styled by Suidas, ψόγος 'Ομήρου and κατὰ τῆς 'Ομήρου ποιήσεως λόγοι ἐννέα.

Notwithstanding the faulty methods of the sophists their criticisms were frequently just and they deserve credit for this,

¹ Friedel, W. O., De soph. stud. Hom. Diss. philol. Hal., vol. I, p. 130 ff., 1873. Examples of the objections of sophists are present in Ar. Soph. El., c. 1v, and Poet., c. xxv, as almost all are of such a nature that they could not be regarded as the objections of philosophers.

² Poet., c. xix, 1456 b 15-19.

³ Blass, Att. Bereds., II, pp. 344-9.

Schol. Por., κ 274: Ζωΐλος ὁ κληθεὶς 'Ομηρομάστιξ . . . ὃς ἔγραψε τὰ καθ' 'Ομήρου γυμνασίας ἕνεκα, εἰωθῶτων καὶ τῶν ῥητόρων ἐν τοῖς ποιηταῖς γυμνάζεσθαι. Two of the objections in Poet., c. xxv, that Apollo should shoot first senseless animals, οὐρῆας μὲν πρῶτον (A 50), and that Achilles should command, "ζωρότερον δὲ κέραιε" (I 203), are attributed to Zoilos (Heracl. Alleg. Hom., 14, Plut. Q. C., v, 4, 2). For other instances of his criticism cf. Longin. περὶ ὕψους, 9, 14; Schol. Por., E 7, E 20, Σ 22, ι 60. Zoilos is the leading representative, at this early period, of the class of critics known as ἐνστατικοί ('objectors'), the term especially applied to grammarians who impugned points in Homer, while the term λυτικοί ('solvers') was applied to those who, in defence of the poet, answered the objections of the ἐνστατικοί. Receiving that by their questionings they aroused others through approval or objection to a more accurate study of Homer. By citations from Homer in their lectures and by special works on his poems they called the attention of thinking men not only to the study of single passages and the significance of Homeric terms, but also to the nature of epic poetry and the aesthetic value of poetic faults.

All the literary, philosophical and critical exegesis of the period immediately succeeding this crude and undeveloped form of criticism centres around Aristotle and his School. Aristotle seems to have realized that the attacks of detractors of Homer and other poets were assaults on the very nature of poetry. He saw into the deeper meaning of the alleged faults of poetry, and in answer to the cavilling criticism of the day, formulated certain principles of explanation based on the fundamental tenets of his poetic theory. In his hands what had before been crude and unscientific receives a systematic treatment.

Aristotle's hearty veneration for Homer is shown by the numerous citations¹ of the Iliad and the Odyssey in his works, and by the frequent expressions of admiration occurring in the Poetics;² perhaps to this we may attribute his appearance as an impetus from the interest taken in the explanation of Homeric difficulties by Aristotle and Zeno, the criticism of the ἐνστατικοί and λυτικοί continued in vogue for many centuries. At Alexandria and later at the courts of the Roman emperors such criticism was at its height, and afforded a leading source of entertainment at all gatherings of learned men. For full accounts of their criticism, cf. Wower de Polymath, Leipz., 1665, cap. 10, § 15 ff.; Lehrs, de Aristarch. stud. Hom., p. 221 ff.; Schrader, Proleg. ad Por., p. 368 ff.; Gräfenhan, Gesch. d. Klass. Philol., I, p. 201 ff.; II, p. 77 ff.; III, p. 223 ff.; IV, p. 268 ff.

¹ See Römer, "Die Homercitate und die Homerischen Fragen des Aristoteles."

² e. g., 1448 b 34-36: ὥσπερ δὲ καὶ τὰ σπουδαῖα μάλιστα ποιητῆς Ὀμηρος ἦν, μόνος γὰρ οὐχ ὅτι ἐβ' ἄλλ' ὅτι καὶ μιμήσεις δραματικὰς ἐποίησεν. 1451 a 23-25: ὁ δ' Ὀμηρος ὥσπερ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα διαφέρει καὶ τοῦτ' εἶοικε καλῶς ἰδεῖν ἦτοι διὰ τέχνην ἢ διὰ φύσιν. 1459 a 30-31: διὸ ὥσπερ εἴπομεν ἤδη καὶ ταύτη θεσπέσιος ἂν φανείη Ὀμηρος παρὰ τοὺς ἄλλους. 1459 b 12: οἷς ἅπασιν Ὀμηρος κέχρηται καὶ πρῶτος καὶ ἰκανῶς. 1460 a 5: Ὀμηρος δὲ ἄλλα τε πολλὰ ἄξιος καὶ δὴ καὶ ὅτι μόνος τῶν ποιητῶν οὐκ ἄγροεὶ ὃ δεῖ ποιεῖν αὐτόν. 1460 a 18, 19: δεδίδαχεν δὲ μάλιστα Ὀμηρος καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ψευδῆ λέγειν ὡς δεῖ.

a defender of the poet against his many detractors. Isokrates¹ testifies that the Homeric poems were objects of study in the Lyceum, and Dio Chrysostom² is authority for the statement that Aristotle in a number of dialogues concerned himself with Homer. Besides these and other indications³ of Aristotle's Homeric activity, of peculiar interest is an especial work which had the Homeric poems for its exclusive object, and which has come down to us under different titles, ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά or προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά.⁴ In these problems, as will be seen later, certain principles and methods for the solution of objections to Homer were applied to special passages. Fragments of the work, found chiefly in the Homeric scholia, have been collected and edited,⁵ and have given rise to various views⁶ as to their exact relation to Aristotle.

¹ Isok., Panathen., 18: ἔλεγον ὡς ἐν τῷ Δυκεῖφ συγκαθεζόμενοι . . . διαλέγοντο περὶ τε τῶν ἄλλων ποιητῶν καὶ τῆς Ἡσίοδου καὶ τῆς Ὀμήρου ποιήσεως.

² Dio Chrys., LIII, 1: καὶ δὴ καὶ Ἀριστοτέλης ἀφ' οὗ φασι τὴν κριτικὴν τε καὶ τὴν γραμματικὴν ἀρχὴν λαβεῖν, ἐν πολλοῖς διαλόγοις περὶ τοῦ ποιητοῦ διέξεισι θαυμάζων αὐτὸν ὡς τὸ πολὺ καὶ τιμῶν· ἔτι δὲ καὶ Ἡρακλείδης ὁ Ποντικός. Schrader (Epileg., p. 1804) is inclined to see in these words a possible reference to the ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά. Cf. Dio Chrys., II, 36.

³ See Wolf, Proleg., p. clxxxiii ff.; Sengebusch, Hom. Diss., I, p. 72 ff.; La Roche, Hom. Textkrit. im Alt., p. 7 ff. (especially on the ἡ ἐκ νάρθηκος ἔκδοσις).

⁴ According to Diog. La., v, 1, 26, the whole work embraced 6 books; according to the third Vita of Aristotle, 10 books; Sengebusch decides that the number of books was 10, and suggests an emendation of Diog. accordingly.

On Aristotle's relation to προβλήματα and λύσεις in general, see Prantl, Ueber die Probleme des Aristoteles, Abh. d. Münch. Akad., 1851, I, cl. vi, pp. 339-377. Treating the extant thirty-eight books περὶ προβλημάτων, Prantl concludes that while Aristotle cannot in any sense be the author of the whole work, yet from the manner in which the themes proposed in the problems are answered it is evident that the principles at the basis of the explanations are Aristotelian. Cf. Susemihl, Gesch. d. griech. Litt. in d. Alex. Zeit., I, p. 159 ff.

⁵ Valentinus Rose, Aristoteles Pseudepigraphus, p. 149 ff.; also Aristotelis Opusc., ed. Berl., vol. v, 1870; Aristotelis fragmenta coll., Rose, Lips., Teubn., 1886; Emil Heitz, Aristotelis Opusc., ed. Paris, vol. IV, 1868.

⁶ Lehrs (de Aristarchi stud. Hom., ed.³, p. 219) was probably the first to doubt the genuineness of the ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά. His arguments were

These evidences of Aristotle's activity in the study of Homer justify the presence of a chapter in the Poetics devoted almost exclusively to the defense of the poet, and account for the traces of Aristotelian influence in the Homeric criticism of the Peripatetics and of later λυτικοί.

Following in the footsteps of their master, Megakleides,¹ Herakleides, Chamaileon and other Peripatetics devoted attention to the solution of Homeric problems. The προβλήματα 'Ομηρικά of Aristotle and his immediate followers were embraced in what Schrader styles a Corpus Peripateticorum, probably in the second century B. C. This work was largely used by Porphyry in his ζητήματα 'Ομηρικά,² and through answered by Sengebusch, p. 75 ff. Later Val. Rose (Ar. Pseudepig., p. 149) pronounced the work a 'volumen ex studiis Peripateticorum philologicis profectum.' La Roche (p. 24), Heitz (die verl. Schriften d. Ar., p. 288), Schrader (Proleg., p. 413) and Vahlen (p. 351) declare for the genuineness of the work.

¹See Schrader, Proleg., p. 414 ff.; Epileg., p. 187 ff.; Philol., XLIV, p. 236 ff. For Megakleides, see schol. Por., K 274, Π 140, X 36, 205, ζ 106; for Herakleides, schol., Β 649, Γ 236, β 51, 63, ν 119. Susemihl (Gesch., II, Anm. 445 d.) does not think the evidence conclusive that Herakleides was a Peripatetic; on this cf. Schrader, Philol., XLIV. Herakleides' treatment of Homeric problems so fully accords with that of Aristotle that, in this species of criticism, there can be no doubt that he is Aristotle's follower. On Chamaileon, see schol. Por., ε 334.

²The fragments of Porphyry's Ζητήματα 'Ομηρικά, preserved in Vat. MS. 305, containing Πορφυρίου φιλοσόφου 'Ομηρικῶν ζητημάτων βιβλίον α', and in the Homeric scholia, first received favorable attention from Valckenaer (Op., II, p. 95 ff.) in 1747. His view that the Ζητ. 'Ομ., the little work Περὶ τοῦ ἐν 'Οδυσσεΐα τῶν νυμφῶν ἄντρου, and other fragments, were derived from a continuous commentary of Homer was refuted by Gildersleeve, De Porphyrii studiis Homericis, Göttingen, 1853, who also established the genuineness of the preface to the Ζητ. Vat. A dissertation of Wollenberg, De Porphyrii stud. philol., I, Berolini, 1854, appeared about the same time. Hermann Schrader has devoted years to the Homeric Questions of Porphyry. The results of his researches are embodied in the two works: Porphyrii Quaestionum Homericarum ad Iliadem pertinentium Reliquiae, Lipsiae, 1880, and Porphyrii Quaestionum Homericarum ad Odysseam pertinentium Reliquiae, Lipsiae, 1890.

Porphry fragments of it are present in the Homeric scholia Ven. B.

Schrader¹ recognizes three main sources for Porphyry's² Ζητήματα Ὀμηρικά: (1) a collection of the solutions of Alexandrian scholars, referred to in schol. Por., I 682; (2) a Corpus of the ζητήματα of Zeno and other Stoics; (3) a Corpus Peripateticorum, consisting of solutions from προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά of Aristotle and his followers. His argument for a Peripatetic source is based on a comparison of the ζητήματα ascribed to Aristotle in the scholia with the examples treated in Poetics, c. xxv; he concludes from the evident uniformity in design and in method, that solutions bearing the name of Aristotle, solutions mentioned in the Poetics and treated at greater length in the scholia, and ἀπορίαι of the scholia agreeing with those of the Poetics, though solutions are not stated, are to be derived from the same source. Further he does not go. This source Schrader identifies with the προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά of Aristotle and his immediate followers, which were embraced in one volume most probably before the close of the second century B. C. He infers that this work is referred to in schol. Por., K 252, which he considers the beginning of some book of Porphyry's Homeric Questions: ἡ συναγωγή τῶν ζητουμένων γέγονε μὲν ἤδη καὶ παρ' ἄλλοις· ἡμεῖς δὲ τὰ προβλήματα λαμβάνοντες παρὰ τῶν ἐξητηκῶτων τὰς λύσεις ἐπικρίνομεν κ. τ. λ. He thinks that lectures of Aristotle on Homeric questions, delivered in his earlier period, were taken down by his students and that these lecture-notes were afterwards supplemented by their own observations (cf. schol. Por., B 649, Γ 236, X 165, μ 128); and hence that the ζητήματα finally embraced in one work are fruits, in a sense, of the Homeric disputations held in the Lyceum. Schrader doubts whether books of problems were edited by Aristotle himself, but declares for the authorship of Aristotle in the collected work, at least so far as concerns its fundamental ideas.¹

¹ Prolegomena, c. III, 2, 3; Epileg., c. II, 2 a-e.

² That Porphyry was an expert critic and commentator of Aristotelian philosophy is evident from his Εἰσαγωγή περὶ τῶν πέντε φωνῶν, an introduction to the Categories, frequently printed with the Organon, and the titles of two lost works, Ἐξήγησις τῶν κατηγοριῶν ἐν ἑπτὰ βιβλίοις πρὸς Γεδάλιον and Περὶ τοῦ μίαν εἶναι τὴν Πλάτωνος καὶ Ἀριστοτέλους αἴρεσιν, βιβλία ζ'. The strongest external evidence of Aristotle's influence on Porphyry is found in Proklos on Plato's Timaeus, p. 18 C. (quoted by Wollenberg), who represents Porphyry as "Περιπατητικὰς ἀποδόσεις παρεισφέροντα λύειν τὰς Πλατωνικὰς ἀπορίας." On the nature of Porphyry's criticism see Wollenberg, p. 15 ff.; Gildersleeve, p. 10.

As is evident from the foregoing discussion, it is proper to regard the twenty-fifth chapter of the Poetics as an abridged statement of principles and methods treated and illustrated more fully in the προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά. In this manner its apologetic tone and the preponderance of examples drawn from the Homeric Epos can be understood. That Aristotle so closely identifies his methods of solving problems with his theory of poetry bespeaks for the προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά a far greater value than has heretofore been attributed to them. And as the design of the chapter and of the προβλήματα was the same—to consider and answer the criticisms and censures of Homer by philosophers and sophists—it is manifest that the key to the solution of the difficult problems to which the chapter has given rise is a faithful study of the traces of Aristotelian influence in the ζητήματα of Porphyry. Where the principles laid down in the chapter exhibit themselves in the scholia, it is evident that passages containing them are either from the Peripatetic source or that Porphyry in his own solutions is following Aristotelian teachings: in either case we are justified in availing ourselves of all the light they afford for the correct interpretation of the chapter.

¹ Cf. Susemihl, Gesch. d. Griech. Litt. in d. Alex. Zeit., II, p. 329: "Jedenfalls ungleich älteren Datums, spätestens wohl aus der zweiten Hälfte des zweiten Jahrhunderts war eine Sammlung der Lösungen homerischer Probleme von Ar. und den ältesten Peripatetikern, hie und da auch von Anderen, wie Herakleides dem Pontiker und Timolaus, welche von Dioskurides dem Verfasser der Schrift über die Sitten bei Homeros, und später von Porphyrios in seinen homerischen Untersuchungen reichlich ausgebeutet ist, mag nun diese Sammlung nur eine neue Auflage der aristotelischen Ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά oder, was doch wohl wahrscheinlicher ist, eine Ergänzung derselben mit manchen Wiederholungen aus ihnen gewesen sein."

ANALYSIS OF POETICS, C. XXV.¹

I.

Aristotle begins by laying down certain general propositions which lie at the basis of his treatment both of the objections brought against poetry and the principles on which they are to be answered. These are intimately connected with his theory of the serious style of poetry developed in the earlier chapters of the Poetics.

A. The objects of representation (1460 b 7–11). The poet, being an imitator, like the painter or any other artist, must of necessity always imitate one of three objects—either things as they were or are (οἷα ἦν ἢ ἔστιν), or things as they are said to be and thought to be (οἷα φασι καὶ δοκεῖ), or things as they should be (οἷα εἶναι δεῖ). Thus the objects of poetic representation are either (a) real events, or (b) current traditions and popular belief, or (c) the ideal, the universal, the 'higher reality.' These observations are more fully treated in cc. II, IX, XV.

Sidney

B. The means of representation (1460 b 11–13). The objects of poetic imitation find expression in language² which employs either ordinary words or rare words or metaphors; besides, poetic language has the right to use many turns of phrase varying from the normal. Aristotle embraces in this short expression the various εἶδη λέξεως treated in cc. XXI, XXII.

¹ In what follows frequent references are made to the following works: Teichmüller, Aristotelische Forschungen, Halle, 1867, vol. I, pp. 135–168; Vahlen, Beiträge zu Aristoteles' Poetik, IV, Berlin, 1867; Butcher, Aristotle's Theory of Poetry and Fine Art, London, 1895. Citations of the schol. Por. are from the two volumes of Schrader already mentioned (p. 14²). The passages, with slight exceptions, occur also in Dindorf, but sometimes under different verses. The text of the Poetics cited is Vahlen's.

² Reading with Vahlen, λέξει, < ἢ κυρίως ὀνόμασιν > ἢ καὶ γλώτταις καὶ μεταφοραῖς. Cf. V., Anm. zu S. 353.

C. The standard of correctness in poetry (1460 b 13–21). ‘There is not the same standard of correctness in the poetic art as in the political¹ art, nor as in any other art or science.’

Plato Aristotle then distinguishes two kinds of fault possible to poetry: the one affects its very essence, the other is accidental. If one propose to himself to imitate something, but has imitated it incorrectly through want of ability (ἀδυναμία), the error is inherent in the poetry. But if the failure is due to an incorrect conception of what he proposes to represent, if, e. g., he has represented a horse advancing both right legs at once, or has introduced technical inaccuracies in medicine, it may be, or in any other art, the error is not essential; though the προαίρεσις or proposal be faulty, he could in the μίμησις meet fully the demands of art.

In this distinction Aristotle asserts that poetry is to be measured not by a moral but by a purely aesthetic standard. All important in his eyes is the perfection of the imitation, the shaping activity of the artist. Poetry must be judged by its own laws, its own basal assumptions, and errors, that are errors only according to some alien standard, are faults κατὰ συμβεβηκός, and accordingly excusable.

II.

THE Ἐπιτιμήματα.

‘From these considerations,’—the objects of imitation, the means of imitation and the standard of correctness in poetry,—proceeds Aristotle, ‘must be solved the objections contained in the problems' (τὰ ἐπιτιμήματα¹ ἐν τοῖς προβλήμασιν, 1460 b 21, 22).

¹ Politics here has special reference to Ethics, and the observation is in answer to Plato. See Vahlen, p. 363; Butcher, p. 207. Aristotle retains the term “ἀρθότης” used by Plato (Vahlen).

What then is the nature of the objections to poetry made by critics? To understand this a study of the closing section of the chapter is necessary, 1461 b 22-24: τὰ μὲν οὖν ἐπιτιμήματα ἐκ πέντε εἰδῶν φέρουσιν, ἧ γὰρ ὡς ἀδύνατα ἢ ὡς ἄλογα ἢ ὡς βλαβερά ἢ ὡς ὑπεναντία ἢ ὡς παρὰ τὴν ὀρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τέχνην.

We must, therefore, before proceeding further, define the five εἶδη from which ἐπιτιμήματα are drawn.

I. ὡς ἀδύνατα,² as 'impossible.'

The term ἀδύνατα is to be understood from its opposite, δύνατα, and by a study of the intimate connection of these terms with the Aristotelian law of the necessary and the probable, κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς καὶ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον, as expounded in the Poetics, c. IX, and elsewhere. It designates those elements in poetry which were regarded by critics as impossible, as not real, not true to life, and therefore proper objects for censure. The pursuit of Hektor³ is mentioned as a case in point (c. XXV, 1460 b 26) in which the attendant circumstances (X 205 sq.) were regarded as ἀδύνατα (mentioned in c. XXIV as ἄλογα). The scholia furnish numerous illustrations of ἀδύνατα: e. g., schol. Por., Γ 397, ἀδύνατόν φασιν εἰς γραῦν μεταβαλεῖν τὴν ιδέαυ τὴν Ἀφροδίτην καὶ νοῆσαι τὴν Ἑλένην τὴν τῆς θεᾶς δειρήν, κ. τ. λ.; schol. Por., E 7, speaking of the flame from the head and shoulders of Diomedes, ἀδύνατον τοῦτο· πῶς γὰρ ἂν ἔζησεν ὁ οὕτω καιόμενος ἀπὸ τῆς κεφαλῆς καὶ τῶν ὤμων; cf. schol. Por., Γ 144, Γ 379, 80, Δ 105, Δ 491, Η 9, Θ 555, Κ 11, Κ 447, α 284, ζ 221.

¹ ἐπιτιμήματα, i. e., fault-finding objections, are not identical with προβλήματα, questions or doubts requiring solution. The former always imply a decision unfavorable to the poet, as is seen in the use of the term and its cognate verb in the Poetics; cf. c. XIX, 1456 b 14-19, οὐδὲν εἰς τὴν ποιητικὴν ἐπιτίμημα φέρεται. . . . τί γὰρ ἂν τις ὑπολάβοι ἡμαρτηθεῖαι ἃ Πρωταγόρας ἐπιτιμᾷ, ὅτι εὐχεσθαι οἰόμενος ἐπιτάττει εἰπὼν "μῆνιν ἄειδε θεά," τὸ γὰρ κελεῖσαι φησὶν ποιεῖν τι ἢ μὴ ἐπιταξίς ἐστιν. Cf. c. XXV, 1460 b 33-36, 1461 b 1-8; XXII, 1458 b 5-7.

² For an estimate of ἀδύνατα, cf. Poet. IX, 1451 a 36 ff.; XXIV, 1460 a 26-28; XXV, 1460 b 24, 1461 b 10, 11; and see Teichmüller, p. 137 ff., and Butcher, p. 157 ff., on their place in Aristotle's theory of poetry.

³ Cf. p. 28.

Poetry may use with confidence impossible elements, if it make them appear natural and credible (c. IX, c. XXIIV, 1460 a 26). Hence, if it be objected that the thing represented is impossible, the poet can answer ἀδύνατον μὲν, πιθανόν δέ, appealing to the standard of correctness in his art. Accordingly, right here can originate a correct ἐπιτίμημα, and this is an objection against the πιθανόν, against the εἰκός. Words or actions objected to on this score are regarded,

II. ὡς ἄλογα,¹ as 'irrational,' 'improbable.'

The ἄλογον is frequently mentioned in the Poetics: in c. XV, 1454 b 6-8, ἄλογον δὲ μηδὲν εἶναι ἐν τοῖς πράγμασιν, εἰ δὲ μή, ἔξω τῆς τραγῳδίας, οἷον τὸ ἐν τῷ Οἰδίποδι τῷ Σοφοκλέους (cf. c. XXIIV, 1460 a 28); in c. XXIIV, 1460 a 13, μᾶλλον δ' ἐνδέχεται ἐν τῇ ἐποποιίᾳ τὸ ἄλογον; and in c. XXIIV, 1460 a 35 sq., as an example of the ἄλογον, is cited the putting out of Odysseus by the Phæacians on the shores of Ithaca (o 119 sq.), which contains irrational elements veiled by the poetic charm with which the poet invests the narration. Also the pursuit of Hektor already mentioned (c. XXIIV, 1460 a 11 ff.).

Of the many instances of ἄλογα in the scholia, most worthy of mention are:

Schol. Por., Γ 236, διὰ τί τὴν Ἑλένην πεποίηκεν ἀγνοοῦσαν περὶ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ὅτι οὐ παρήσαν, δεκαετοῦς τοῦ πολέμου ὄντος καὶ αἰχμαλώτων πολλῶν γινομένων; ἄλογον γάρ, κ. τ. λ., explained by Aristotle and Herakleides.

Schol. Por., A 399, τί ποτε ἄρα βουλόμενος ταῦτα ἔπλασε πολὺ ἔχοντα τὸ ἄλογον καὶ ἀνάρμοστον, εἴ γε Ἄθηνᾶ καὶ Ἥρα καὶ Ποσειδῶν ἐβούλοντο συνδῆσαι τὸν Δία, ἣ μὲν θυγάτηρ οὖσα οἱ δὲ ἀδελφοί. Cf. schol. Por., A 62, 63, A 420, Γ ¹Teichmüller, p. 138 ff.; Vahlen, p. 293 ff.; Butcher, p. 163 ff., p. 363.

122, Γ 315, 16, Γ 365, Ε 341, Ε 741, Μ 25, δ 1, θ 564, ι 240, κ 190, χ 412, ω 1.

III. ὡς βλαβερά,¹ 'as morally hurtful.'

Strange to say this term occurs nowhere else in the Poetics, seldom if at all as a source of objection in the scholia. Yet the βλαβερόν is indicated in certain passages where depravity of character (πονηρία, μοχθηρία) is censured because introduced without an inner necessity demanding it: c. xv, 1454 a 28-9, ἔστιν δὲ παράδειγμα πονηρίας μὲν ἡθους μὴ ἀναγκαῖον οἶον ὁ Μενέλαος ὁ ἐν τῷ Ὀρέστη; c. xxv, 1461 b 19 ff., ὀρθῇ δ' ἐπιτίμησις καὶ ἀλογία καὶ μοχθηρία ὅταν μὴ ἀνάγκης οὐσης μηθὲν χρήσῃται τῷ ἀλόγῳ, ὥσπερ Εὐριπίδης τῷ Αἰγεί, ἢ τῇ πονηρίᾳ ὥσπερ ἐν Ὀρέστη τοῦ Μενελάου. Art commits a fault if it injure morality.

The βλαβερά of this passage is the βλαβερά of Plato, Rep. 391 E, whose criticisms are mainly from the moral standpoint. Cf. schol. Por., Ω 527 ff., μέμφεται τὴν δόξαν Πλάτων (resp., II, p. 379 D) λέγων, ὡς ὁ θεὸς ἀγαθόν, οὐδὲν δὲ ἀγαθὸν βλαβερόν, ὃ δὲ μὴ βλαβερόν οὐδὲ βλάπτει κ. τ. λ. Aristotle's point of view, on the other hand, is ever aesthetic, even when considering the morality requisite in poetic characters. Yet, as Butcher shows, the aesthetic ideal of character in the Poetics implies a high though not a perfect morality.

IV. ὡς ὑπεναντία,² as 'contradictory.'

τὸ ὑπεναντίον has been badly rendered 'the inconsistency,' since τὸ ἀδύνατον and τὸ ἄλογον are likewise inconsistencies, the former with the truth, the latter with probability. It never expresses simply the contradictory to truth or probability; when such is the case the dative must be added (as 1461 b 3, ὑπεναντίον τῇ οἰήσει) or the relation understood unequivocally from the connection. Where ὑπεναντίον stands alone it expresses inconsistency with the special representation, whether it be in the composition of the dramatic action (as in c. XVII, 1455 a 22–26) or in the narration.

¹ Teichmüller, p. 140 ff.; Butcher, c. v, p. 200 ff.

² Teichmüller, p. 144 ff.; Vahlen, p. 333 ff.

A proper conception of the term is derived from a study of its usage in c. XXV, 1461 b 15–19: τὰ δ' ὑπεναντία ὡς εἰρημένα οὕτω σκοπεῖν ὥσπερ οἱ ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἔλεγχοι εἰ τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ πρὸς τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ ὡσαύτως, ὥστε καὶ αὐτὸν ἢ πρὸς ἅ αὐτὸς λέγει ἢ ὃ ἂν φρόνιμος ὑποθῆται. Hence ὑπεναντία is to be understood as τὰ ὑπεναντία ὡς εἰρημένα or, as Twining and Vahlen and Butcher prefer, τὰ ὑπεναντίως εἰρημένα, i. e., the inconsistent as said, in the words, in the representation made by means of language. Hence in this ἐπιτίμημα we have a contrast drawn to ἄλογα and ἀδύνατα denoting inconsistencies with actuality and probability, as in the τὰ ὑπεναντίως εἰρημένα it must be considered 'whether the poet contradicts either what he says himself or what is tacitly assumed by a person of intelligence.' The correct translation, therefore, of ὡς ὑπεναντία is 'as contradictory.'

Instances of ὑπεναντία,¹ or 'contradictions' objected to and accounted for, are very numerous in the Homeric scholia: e. g., schol. Por., B 649, διὰ τί ἐνταῦθα μὲν πεποιήκεν "ἄλλοι θ' οὐ Κρήτην ἐκατόμπολιν ἀμφενέμοντο," ἐν δ' Ὀδυσσεΐα (τ 174) εἰπὼν ὅτι ἔστιν ἡ Κρήτη καλὴ καὶ πείρα καὶ περίρρυτος ἐπά-

¹ Certain formulae for the expression of ὑπεναντία are present in the scholia.

1. Frequently the contradictory passages are quoted or the substance stated in the formula:

{ πῶς εἰπὼν νῦν φησι, or in some similar form. Cf. schol.

Por., A 194, E 741, K 561, Ξ 200, etc.

2. Certain terms are used to express that passages cited are contradictory, usually some form of μάχομαι or of ἐναντίον:

(a). { τὸ μάχεται τῷ Cf. schol. Por., E 576, quoted above, X 147, etc.

(b). { τὸ μάχεσθαι δοκεῖ τῷ Cf. schol. Por., B 844, B 822, T 268, etc.

γει· “ἐν δ’ ἄνθρωποι πολλοὶ ἀπειρέσιοι καὶ ἐννήκοντα πόλεις;” τὸ γὰρ ποτὲ μὲν ἐνενήκοντα ποτὲ δὲ ἑκατὸν λέγειν δοκεῖ ἐναντίον εἶναι, κ. τ. λ. Solutions from Herakleides and Aris-totle follow.

Schol. Por., E 576, τὸ “ἐνθα Πυλαιμέναε ἐλέτην” . . . μάχεται τῷ ἐν τῇ παρὰ νηυσὶ μάχῃ ζῶντι καὶ ἐπομένῳ τῷ παιδί Ἀρπαλίῳνι· “παρὰ δέ σφι πατὴρ κίε δάκρυα λείβων” (N 658), κ. τ. λ. Cf. schol. Por., Γ 277, E 741, etc.

V. ὡς παρὰ τὴν ὀρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τέχνην,¹ as ‘contrary to artistic correctness.’

The interpretation of this, the fifth source of ἐπιτιμήματα, has presented great difficulty to certain commentators. Twining and Vahlen do not see how it could be identified with objections against the poetic art as such. If such were meant, says Vahlen, ἀδύνατα and ἄλογα are also offences against the poetic art, and, as G. Hermann actually proposed, παρὰ τὴν ὀρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τὴν τέχνην might be expected. And Twining offers the objections: (1) that κατὰ συμβεβηκός will be entirely omitted in the enumeration; (2) that the twelve λύσεις, shortly to be treated, will not meet the ἐπιτίμημα, as bad imitation admits of no answer; and (3) that it makes the four preceding ἐπιτιμήματα not essential but accidental faults. Accordingly they both understand it as referring to the correctness, not of poetry itself, but of other arts, which may be incidentally treated in poetry, thus to a (c). δοκεῖ μάχεσθαι ἑαυτῷ ὁ ποιητής; e. g., schol. Por., H 9.

(d). ὡς μαχόμενα λέγοντος; e. g., schol. Por., Γ 234.

(e). $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \tauὸ \\ \tauοῦτο \end{array} \right. \dots \dots \dots \text{ἐναντίον τῷ} \dots \dots \dots$ e. g., schol. Por., B 848, A 3, B 266, etc.

(f). $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \tauὸ \\ \tauοῦτο \end{array} \right. \dots \dots \dots \text{ἐναντίον} \dots \dots \dots \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{φαίνεται} \\ \text{δοκεῖ} \end{array} \right. \tauῷ; \text{ e. g., schol., A 3, B}$

649, λ 239, etc.

(g). ἐναντία ἑαυτῷ ὁ ποιητής λέγει; e. g., schol., Z 265, A 52, etc.

(h). Note the terms ἐναντιολογία (schol. Por., B 649, Ξ 200), ἐναντίωμα (schol. Por., B 649 and Ξ 200) and διαφωρία, διαφωρεῖν (schol. Por., Z 265, 488, Φ 388-90).

¹ Vahlen, p. 388; Twining, vol. II, N. 261; Teichmüller, p. 146.

technical correctness, to the inaccurate in respect of some special art. So too, Butcher.

Teichmüller, on the other hand, understands the phrase as referring to objections against the art of poetry itself. He justifies the distribution of the ἐπιτιμήματα, by distinguishing the fifth from the first two εἶδη. He shows that the ἄλογα and ἀδύνατα cannot always be considered as incompatible with good imitation as ἀδύνατα are admissible if the artist knows how to deceive us with our own mistaken conclusions, and even ἄλογα are allowed, if possible not on the stage, but yet in what precedes the action; and in this the Epos has much greater freedom than tragedy. In this view I accord with Teichmüller.

The παρὰ τὴν ὀρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τέχνην is treated fully in the earlier section of the chapter, 1460 b 13-33, which explains what is meant by artistic correctness. By the various expressions, μιμήσασθαι < ἤμαρτε δ' ἐν τῷ μιμήσασθαι δι' > ἀδυναμίαν, — αὐτῆς ἢ ἀμαρτία, — ἀμάρτημα . . . καθ' ἑαυτήν, — εἰ ἀμιμήτως ἔγραψεν, — παρὰ τὴν ὀρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τέχνην, — Aristotle means to indicate all such faults as are incompatible with good imitation—that is, in his view, with good poetry. Hence all cases of ἀδύνατα, βλαβερά, etc., which do not meet the end of poetry, and all instances of censure of the poetical technique of the Epos and other poetry, fall naturally under this head.

Of the latter class the scholia furnish examples not a few, some bearing the name of Aristotle, and no doubt many a good observation in the scholia touching on technical questions in the poetry of the Epos is derived from the ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά of Aristotle and his followers.

Certain of these scholia exhibit a terminology with which we are already familiar in the Poetics in the treatment of ἦθος in the representations of poetry.

(a). τὸ ἀνώμαλον, 'the inconsistent in character.'

In the schol. Por., Ω 559 ff. (fr. 168, ed. Teubner), in which passage Achilles addresses Priam in harsh terms, we read:

'Αριστοτέλης φησὶν ἀνώμαλον εἶναι τὸ Ἀχιλλέως ἦθος. Römer¹ thinks rightly that Aristotle does not mean by this to censure the poet, but in defending the character of Achilles, perhaps against Plato (Hippias Minor, 370 A), he explains that Homer has represented Achilles, as far as concerns ἦθος, from the first to the last book, perfectly correctly: namely, ἀνώμαλον τὸ ἦθος. It is what is emphasized in Poet., c. xv, 1454 a 25: τέταρτον δὲ τὸ ὀμαλόν· κὰν γὰρ ἀνώμαλός τις ἦ ὁ τὴν μίμησιν παρέχων καὶ τοιοῦτον ἦθος ὑποτιθεῖς, ὅμως ὀμαλῶς ἀνώμαλον δεῖ εἶναι. Aristotle accordingly understands the ἦθος of Achilles as ὀμαλῶς ἀνώμαλον.² Eustathios' observation on the passage (p. 1365) seems to justify this view: σημείωσαι δὲ ὅτι Ἀριστοτέλης, ὡς φασιν οἱ παλαιοί, ἀνώμαλον εἶναι τὸ τοῦ Ἀχιλλέως ἦθος συνάγει, ὃς τὰ πρῶτα μιλιχίοις δεξιωσάμενος τὸν ἰκέτην Πρίαμον, εἶτα λεοντωθεῖς οἶον, ὡς δηλοῖ τὸ "λέων ὡς ἄλτο θύραζε" (572) συνάγεται δὲ τὸ τοῦ Ἀχιλλέως ἄστατον καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀράψφδιᾳ καὶ ἐν ταῖς Λιταῖς. Cf. A 169, I 357, I 619-650. It seems evident, therefore, that Aristotle solved an ἀπορία based on the inconsistent character of Achilles in the above mentioned manner.

(b). τὸ ἀπρεπές,³ the improper or unbecoming in character, is not expressly mentioned in c. xxv, but it is hinted at in the reference to the current stories concerning the gods (1460 b 35-6; cf. schol. Por., A 211, B 8, Δ 4, Τ 67). Aristotle's conception of τὸ ἀπρεπές is to be understood from c. xv, where 'propriety' is mentioned as one of the four requisites of character: δεύτερον δὲ τὰ ἀρμόττοντα· ἔστιν γὰρ ἀνδρείον μὲν τὸ ἥθος, ἀλλ' οὐχ ἀρμόττον γυναικί οὕτως ἀνδρείαν ἢ δεινὴν εἶναι (1454 a 22–24). Two examples of character, inappropriate and incongruous (ἀπρεποῦς καὶ μὴ ἀρμόττοντος), are mentioned, on which see Twining, vol. I, p. 144⁶. Accordingly, as propriety of character is a prime requisite of good imitation, τὸ ἀπρεπές may appropriately be classified under ὡς παρὰ τὴν ὀρθότητα τὴν κατὰ τέχνην. Its application in the scholia is extensive. See, for example:

¹ Römer: Die Homercitate und d. Homerischen Fragen d. Aristoteles, p. 297 ff.

² It would be well for modern separatists of the Homeric poems to take to heart the discrepancies which Sokrates, in the Hippias Minor, discovers in the words and actions of Achilles, and to weigh well Aristotle's solution of the difficulties they suggest.

³ Römer (p. 308) forcibly brings out the treatment of ἀπρεπῆ by the Alexandrian grammarians, and ascribes most of the passages in the scholia, in reference to the πρέπον, to the Alexandrian time. The employment of Aristotelian λύσεις to so many of them bespeaks an earlier date.

Schol. Por., B 183 (fr. 143, ed. Teubn.): ἀπρεπές εἶναι δοκεῖ τὴν χλαῖναν ἀποβαλόντα μονοχίτωνά θείν τὸν Ὀδυσσεά διὰ τοῦ στρατοπέδου, καὶ μάλιστα οἶος Ὀδυσσεὺς εἶναι ὑπέιληπται. φησὶ δ' Ἀριστοτέλης, κ. τ. λ. Cf. schol. Por., E 778, Ath., v. 6, p. 188^o, for other ἀπρεπή treated by Aristotle.

Schol. Por., B 8 ff.: ἀπρεπές δὲ τὸ λέγειν πανσυδίη· “νῦν γὰρ κεν ἔλοι Τρώων πόλιν εὐρύαγυιαν” (v. 12). τὸ γὰρ ψεύδεσθαι τὸν Δία αἰρήσειν μέλλοντα τὴν πόλιν ἄτοπον, κ. τ. λ. Cf. schol. Por., A 18, A 31, A 42, A 211, B 82, Δ 4, E 778, I 186, I 203, I 453, I 591, γ 72, ζ 244, θ 78, ι 5, λ 489, ω 192.

Akin to ἀπρεπές is the term ἀσύμφορον, ‘inexpedient,’ which occurs occasionally in the scholia. See e. g., schol. Por., Υ 67: τοῦ ἀσύμφορου μὲν ὁ περὶ θεῶν ἔχεται καθόλου λόγος, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ τοῦ ἀπρεποῦς. οὐ γὰρ πρέποντας τοὺς ὑπὲρ τῶν θεῶν μύθους φησὶν· κ. τ. λ. Cf. schol. Por., Λ 405, Ζ 234, ι 106, etc.¹

¹ τὸ ἄτοπον, ‘the odd,’ ‘the absurd,’ a term occurring frequently in the Poetics and in the scholia, seems to be used to characterize any variation from the necessary and the probable, and is in consequence often used in conjunction with ἄλογον, ἀπρεπές, etc. It occurs in the chapter in connection with the incident of Ikarion: τοῦτο δὲ πέπονθε τὰ περὶ Ἰκάριον· οἶονται γὰρ αὐτὸν Λάκωνα εἶναι· ἄτοπον οὖν τὸ μὴ ἐντυχεῖν τὸν Τηλέμαχον αὐτῷ εἰς Λακεδαίμονα ἐλθόντα (1461 b 4–6). And in c. XXIV, in the discussion of the wonderful and the irrational in Epic poetry, Aristotle adds: ἂν δὲ θῆ καὶ φαίνηται εὐλογωτέρας, ἐνδέχεσθαι [sc. δεῖ] καὶ ἄτοπον, ἐπεὶ καὶ τὰ ἐν Ὀδυσσεΐα ἄλογα τὰ περὶ τὴν ἔκθεσιν ὡς οὐκ ἂν ἦν ἀνεκτὰ δῆλον ἂν γένοιτο, εἰ αὐτὰ φαῦλος ποιητῆς ποιήσειεν· νῦν δὲ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀγαθοῖς ὁ ποιητῆς ἀφανίζει ἡδύτων τὸ ἄτοπον (1460 a 35–b 2) (cf. Butcher, p. 163). Cf. schol. Por., ν 119: τὴν τῶν Φαιάκων

III.

THE ΛΥΣΕΙΣ.

In the brief summing up at the close of the chapter, Aristotle states that the number of λύσεις considered is twelve,¹ and that they should be sought under the heads above mentioned. The precise determination of the twelve meant, has given the editors trouble, as is seen in the attempts of Hermann,² Twining, Susemihl, and Ritter, who is followed by Teichmüller and Vahlen. Twining, referring to the number twelve, aptly remarks: "The reader who regards his own ease will, I believe, do well to take this for granted."

ἀτοπίαν, καθ' ἣν τὸν Ὀδυσσεῖα καθεύδοντα μὴ διπνύσαντες εἰς τὴν γῆν κατέθεντο τοῦ τε Ὀδυσσεῖος τὸν ἄκαιρον ὕπνον διαλύειν πειρώμενος ὁ Ποντικός Ἡρακλείδης φησὶν ἀτόπους εἶναι τοὺς ἐξ ὧν εἴρηκεν ὁ ποιητὴς μὴ στοχαζομένους περὶ τοῦ παντὸς τρόπου τῶν Φαιάκων κ. τ. λ.

The term frequently occurs in Aristotelian προβλήματα, e. g., schol. Por., B 649, treating the ἐναντίον in passages about Crete, . . . Ἀριστοτέλης δὲ οὐκ ἔτοπον φησιν, εἰ μὴ κ. τ. λ. Cf. schol. Por., Δ 297, ι 106. See further, schol. Por., Δ 297, ζ 129, ι 167, ι 453, ι 591, π 7, etc.

Other scholia touching upon technical questions in poetry are as follows:

Schol. Por., B 73 (fr. 142, ed. Teubn.): διὰ τί ὁ Ἀγαμέμνων ἀπεπειρῶτο τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, καὶ οὕτως ἔπραξεν ὥστε ὀλίγον τὰ ἐναντία συμβῆναι ἢ ἐβουλεύετο; καὶ τὸ κάλυμα ἀπὸ μηχανῆς ἢ γὰρ Ἀθηνᾶ ἐκάλυψεν ἔστι δὲ ἀποίητον τὸ μηχανήμα λύειν ἄλλως εἰ μὴ ἐξ αὐτοῦ τοῦ μύθου. φησὶ δὲ ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης, ποιητικὸν μὲν εἶναι τὸ μμείσθαι τὰ εἰωθότα γίνεσθαι καὶ ποιητῶν μᾶλλον τὸ κινδύνους παρεισάγειν κ. τ. λ. Cf. Poet., xv, 1454 a 37-b 5.

Schol. Por., τ 467 ff.: Ἀριστοτέλης δὲ, φασὶν, ἐπιλαμβάνεται τοῦ τοιοῦτου ἀναγνωρισμοῦ, λέγων ὡς ἄρα κατὰ τὸν ποιητὴν τῷ τοιοῦτῳ λόγῳ πᾶς οὐλὴν ἔχων Ὀδυσσεύς ἐστιν. κ. τ. λ. Cf. Poet., c. xv, 1454 b 25. See further, schol., N 521, ζ 1, π 25, π 152, ζ 125, ζ 245, τ 108, x 165, ο 221, ο 527, θ 100, θ 267, μ 3, 4, for passages, probably of Peripatetic origin, touching upon the art of Homer.

¹ αἱ δὲ λύσεις ἐκ τῶν εἰρημένων ἀριθμῶν σκεπτεταί, εἰσὶν δὲ δώδεκα, 1461 b 24, 5.

² G. Hermann, Comm. ad Poet., p. 189; Twining, vol. II, N. 262; Susemihl, Poet. Anm., p. 349; Ritter, p. 287; Teichmüller, p. 155; Vahlen, p. 390.

In the following classification, I differ at two important points with Ritter and agree most closely with Twining, who, out of sixteen possible solutions, thinks that the twelve which are adopted in this paper are most probably the twelve meant by Aristotle.

Aristotle expressly refers to the general propositions previously considered, as premises from which the answers are to be derived: ὥστε δεῖ τὰ ἐπιτιμήματα ἐν τοῖς προβλήμασιν ἐκ τούτων ἐπισκοποῦντα λύειν (1460 b 21, 2). Hence the λύσεις of the chapter range themselves naturally under the following heads:

A. Λύσεις from a consideration of artistic correctness.

First to be considered are solutions for ἐπιτιμήματα affecting the poetic art itself (πρῶτον μὲν τὰ πρὸς αὐτὴν τὴν τέχνην, 1460 b 22).

I. The End of Poetry.¹ When something impossible is represented, it is an error; but yet the fault may be justified, if the end of the art be thereby attained. This Aristotle finds in the pleasurable astonishment, the heightened wonder (τὸ θαυμαστόν) proper in a peculiar degree to epic poetry; the fault is justified if the presence of the ἀδύνατον makes the passage containing it more marvellous (ἐκπληκτικώτερον). The instance cited by Aristotle is the pursuit of Hektor (Il., X 105 ff.), treated in c. XXIV as an ἄλογον, which on the stage would appear highly improbable and ludicrous, but in the epic narrative is powerfully imaginative.

¹ 1460 b 23 ff.: < εἰ > ἀδύνατα πεποιήται, ἡμάρτηται, ἀλλ' ὀρθῶς ἔχει, εἰ τυγχάνει τοῦ τέλους τοῦ αὐτῆς, τὸ γὰρ τέλος εἴρηται, εἰ οὕτως ἐκπληκτικώτερον ἢ αὐτὸ ἢ ἄλλο ποιεῖ μέρος. παράδειγμα ἢ τοῦ Ἑκτορος δίωξις, κ. τ. λ. Cf. c. XXIV, 1460 a 11-18: δεῖ μὲν οὖν ἐν ταῖς τραγωδίαις ποιεῖν τὸ θαυμαστόν, μᾶλλον δ' ἐνδέχεται ἐν τῇ ἐποποιίᾳ τὸ ἄλογον, δι' ὃ συμβαίνει μάλιστα τὸ θαυμαστόν, διὰ τὸ μὴ ὄραν εἰς τὸν πράττοντα, ἐπεὶ [τὰ] τὰ περὶ τὴν Ἑκτορος δίωξιν ἐπὶ σκηνῆς ὄντα γελοῖα ἀν φανείη, οἱ μὲν ἐστῶτες καὶ οὐ διώκοντες, ὁ δὲ ἀνανεῶν, ἐν δὲ τοῖς ἔπεσιν λανθάνει. τὸ δὲ θαυμαστόν ἡδύ.

Schol. Por., X 205: Μεγακλείδης πλάσμα εἶναι φησι τοῦτο τὸ μονομάχιον. πῶς γὰρ τοσαύτας μυριάδας νεύματι Ἀχιλλεὺς ἀπέστρεφεν; Vahlen, p. 356 ff.; Butcher, p. 163 ff.

Plato vs

With the 'End of Poetry' I would identify the phrase, πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν, occurring in 1461 b 9, 10: ὅλως δὲ τὸ ἀδύνατον μὲν πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν . . . δεῖ ἀνάγειν, and offer in confirmation the Aristotelian schol., Γ 236 (fr. 147, ed. Teubn.), . . . οὐδὲ γὰρ πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν πρὸ ἔργου ἦν ἡ τούτων μνήμη, κ. τ. λ.

Yet, adds Aristotle, this justification of a fault through an appeal to the end of poetry is only a proper one when a like effect could not have been produced by other means, for, if it is possible, no fault at all should occur.

II. To the Accidental (πρὸς συμβεβηκός)¹ is to be referred all technical inaccuracies as regards other arts and sciences present in the poem. This refers to the distinction, already established, between essential and accidental faults in poetry. In answer to an objection one can raise the question, in which does the fault consist (ποτέρων ἐστὶ τὸ ἀμάρτημα)—in something affecting the art, i. e., the μίμησις, or in something only accidental to the μίμησις. It is a less error not to know that a doe has no horns than to paint one inartistically.

An excellent illustration of this is found in c. XIX, where Aristotle, after saying that a knowledge of the figures of speech belongs to the art of declamation and to the masters of that science, continues: παρὰ γὰρ τὴν τούτων γνῶσιν ἢ ἀγνοίαν οὐδὲν εἰς τὴν ποιητικὴν ἐπιτίμημα φέρεται ὃ τι καὶ ἄξιον σπουδῆς· τί γὰρ ἂν τις ὑπολάβοι ἡμαρτῆσθαι ἂν Πρωταγόρας ἐπιτιμᾷ, ὅτι εὐχεσθαι οἰόμενος ἐπιτάττει εἰπὼν "μῆνιν ἄειδε θεά;" τὸ γὰρ κελεύσαι φησὶν ποιεῖν τι ἢ μὴ ἐπίταξις ἐστίν. διὸ παρείσθω ὡς ἄλλης καὶ οὐ τῆς ποιητικῆς ὃν θεώρημα (1456 b 13-20). On the rhetorical significance of this objection of Protagoras, see A. J. P., XIII, pp. 399, 433.

¹1460 b 29-32: ἔτι ποτέρων ἐστὶ τὸ ἀμάρτημα, τῶν κατὰ τὴν τέχνην ἢ κατ' ἄλλο συμβεβηκός; ἔλαττον γὰρ εἰ μὴ ἦδει ὅτι ἔλαφος θήλεια κέρατα οὐκ ἔχει ἢ εἰ ἀμιμήτως ἔγραψεν. Vahlen, p. 358. On τὸ συμβεβηκός in Aristotle, see Butcher, p. 169.

B. Λύσεις from a consideration of the objects of imitation. The solutions following, introduced by πρὸς δὲ τούτοις, are derived from a consideration of the objects of representation. As the poet, being an imitator, endeavors to represent either (1) actual events, or (2) current traditions and belief, or (3) poetic ideality, if the objection is based on one of the three, the explanation is to be derived from one of the other two.

III. To Poetic Truth,¹ or the ideality peculiar to poetry, the appeal is made in case a representation is censured as being not true to fact. The expression here used, *ἀλλ' ἴσως <ὡς> δεῖ*² is identical in meaning with *οἶα εἶναι δεῖ*³ (1460 b 11), οἶους δεῖ sc. εἶναι (b 34), βέλτιον (b 36), and πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον (1461 b 10), all of which are intended to signify the principle of ideal truth in poetry, emphasized by Aristotle in c. IX and elsewhere. The δεῖ sc. εἶναι of these expressions, the 'ought to be,' and the βέλτιον, 'the better,' are to be taken in the aesthetic, not in the moral sense; and while a high degree of morality is demanded in poetic characters it is viewed by Aristotle purely from the aesthetic point of view. So Sophokles asserts that he represents men as they ought to be; Euripides men as they are.

¹ 1460 b 32-35: πρὸς δὲ τούτοις ἐὰν ἐπιτιμᾶται ὅτι οὐκ ἀληθῆ, ἀλλ' ἴσως δεῖ, οἶον καὶ Σοφοκλῆς ἔφη αὐτὸς μὲν οἶους δεῖ ποιεῖν, Εὐριπίδην δὲ οἶοι εἰσίν, ταύτην λυτέον. Butcher, p. 153 ff.

² ἀλλ' ἴσως <ὡς> δεῖ scil. εἶναι, a conjecture of Vahlen's.

³ The passages here cited for βέλτιον and οἶα δεῖ are synonymous with βελτίονας ἢ καθ' ἡμᾶς (c. II, 1448 a 4; cf. a 12, c. xv, 1454 b 9)—βελτίους . . . τῶν νῦν (c. II, 1448 a 18)—καλλίους (c. xv, 1454 b 11); cf. schol. Por., Γ 236 (fr. 147, ed. Teubn.), φησὶ μὲν οὖν Ἀριστοτέλης . . . ὅπως τὸ ἦθος βελτίων φανῆ κ. τ. λ.; and with οἶοι εἰσίν, in the remark of Sophokles, are to be compared οἶα ἦν ἢ ἔστιν, 1460 b 10, ἀληθῆ, b 36, and ποιούτους sc. καθ' ἡμᾶς, and δμοίους of c. II (1448 a 5, 6, etc).

On the observation of Sophokles, see Twining, N. 237; Vahlen, p. 359; Butcher, p. 343. From a study of the synonymous phrases I agree with Vahlen in understanding εἶναι with οἶους δεῖ, rather than ποιεῖν which Butcher wishes. As the 'ought' is the 'ought' of aesthetic obligation in either case, the distinction in meaning is slight whichever word be understood.

IV. To *Current Legends and Popular Belief*¹ an appeal is made in case the representation is censured as being neither idealistic nor true to fact. οὕτω φασίν of this passage is synonymous with οἶά φασιν καὶ δοκεῖ (1460 b 10), πρὸς τὴν δόξαν (1461 b 10) and πρὸς ἃ φασιν (1461 b 14), all of which are intended to express the traditional legends and established opinions of people in general, proper subjects for poetic treatment because they gain ready credence. For instance, objection was made to the stories of the gods told by the poets. These, explains Aristotle, are neither higher than reality nor true to fact, but yet men say so and believe so, and the poet is perfectly right in accommodating himself to the popular belief. The principle here laid down receives striking confirmation in the scholia. Fault was found with T 108 ff., where Hera demands an oath from Zeus: . . . τὸ μὲν οὖν ὄλον μυθῶδες· καὶ γὰρ οὐδ' ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ ταυτὰ φησιν Ὅμηρος, οὐδὲ γινόμενα εἰσάγει, ἀλλ' ὡς διαδεδομένων περὶ τὴν Ἡρακλέους γένεσιν μέμνηται. ῥητέον δὲ ὅτι καὶ ὁ μῦθος εἰκότως εἰσάγει τὴν Ἡραν ὀρκουσαν τὸν Δία . . . οὕτως Ἀριστοτέλης (fr. 163, ed. Teubn., schol. Por., T 108).

As we have seen, the tales concerning the gods were regarded as ἀπρεπῆ (cf. schol. Por., T 67, Σ 489). This λύσις, accordingly, is the object of appeal in cases of ἀπρεπῆ, of ἀδύνατα (τὸ ἀδύνατον . . . πρὸς τὴν δόξαν δεῖ ἀνάγειν, 1461 b 10) and of ἄλογα (πρὸς ἃ φασιν τᾶλογα, 1461 b 14).

V. To Real Events,² or to Custom, an appeal is made in case the poetic idealization of a representation is questioned. The phrase ἀλλ' οὕτως εἶχεν is synonymous with οἶα ἦν ἢ ἔστιν of 1460 b 10, and with οὕτω . . . τότε ἐνόμιζον below. This appeal to what actually takes place is intimately connected with the Aristotelian law of probability or necessity, as is evident from Poet., c. ix, 1451 b 16–19: αἴτιον δ' ὅτι πιθανόν ἐστι τὸ δυνατόν· τὰ μὲν οὖν μὴ γενόμενα οὐπω πιστεύομεν εἶναι δυνατά, τὰ δὲ γενόμενα φανερόν ὅτι δυνατά, οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἐγένετο, εἰ ἦν ἀδύνατα.

¹ 1460 b 35 ff.: εἰ δὲ μηδετέρως, ὅτι οὕτω φασίν· οἶον τὰ περὶ θεῶν ἴσως γὰρ οὔτε βέλτιον [οὔτε] λέγειν οὔτ' ἀληθῆ, ἀλλ' ἔτυχεν ὡσπερ Ξενοφάνης· ἀλλ' οὖν φασι. Vahlen, p. 359; Butcher, p. 165 ff.

² 1461 a 1-4: τὰ δὲ ἴσως οὐ βέλτιον μὲν, ἀλλ' οὕτως εἶχεν, οἶον τὰ περὶ τῶν δπλων, "ἔγχεα δὲ σφιν Ὀρθ' ἐπὶ σαυρωτῆρος." οὕτω γὰρ τότε ἐνόμιζον, ὡσπερ καὶ νῦν Ἰλλυριοί. Cf. Eustath., 1477, 9: "Ὅμηρος γὰρ ἔθη καταλέγει οὐ μόνον ὅσα πολιτείας ἐστὶν ἀστείας καὶ ἐπικριβωμένης καὶ ἐμβριθοῦς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσα ἐπεχωρίασε τοῖς τότε.

The example cited is Iliad., K 152 f., ἔγχεα δέ σφιν ὄρθ' ἐπὶ σαυρωτῆρος ἐλήλατο, 'but their spears were driven into the ground erect on the spikes of the butts,' referring to the arms of the comrades of Diomedes, and the scholia to the passage make clear the nature of the objection (fr. 160, ed. Teubn.): φαύλη δοκεῖ εἶναι ἡ τῶν δοράτων ἐπὶ σαυρωτῆρας στάσις· καὶ δὴ πανταχοῦ θόρυβον ἤδη πεποίηκε νύκτωρ ἐν μόνον πεσόν. λύει δ' Ἀριστοτέλης λέγων ὅτι τοιαῦτα αἰεὶ ποιεῖ Ὀμηρος οἶα ἦν τότε. ἦν δὲ τοιαῦτα τὰ παλαιὰ οἰάπερ καὶ νῦν ἐν τοῖς βαρβάροις· πολλοὶ δὲ οὕτω χρώνται τῶν βαρβάρων. Hence it was regarded as poetically bad (φαύλη = οὐ βέλτιον of the Poetics) that the lances were placed near the sleeping warriors with the butt-end on the earth, as the sudden falling of one of them would arouse nightly disturbance and confusion. Perhaps true, says Aristotle, but such was the custom at that time, just as now among the Illyrians.

Other Aristotelian ἀπορήματα contain λύσεις based upon a consideration of the οἶα ἦν τότε or ἔθος. Thus in schol. Por., K 194 (fr. 159, ed. Teubn.), Aristotle raises the question why the leaders were represented as deliberating in council outside the wall when it was possible to deliberate inside in safety, and answers his own question as follows: . . . πρῶτον μὲν οὖν οὐκ εἰκὸς ἦν ἀποκινδυνεύειν τοὺς Τρῶας οὐτ' ἐπιτίθεσθαι νύκτωρ· οὐ γὰρ τῶν εὐτυχοῦντων ἦν ἀποκινδυνεύειν, ἔπειτα ἐν ἐρημίᾳ καὶ καθ' ἡσυχίαν βουλευέσθαι περὶ τῶν τηλικούτων ἔθος. κ. τ. λ. Further, in response to the objection that Achilles dragged Hektor around the tomb of Patroklos, contrary to the custom with respect to the dead, . . . ἔστι δὲ λύειν, φησὶν Ἀριστοτέλης, καὶ εἰς τὰ ὑπάρχοντα ἀνάγοντα ἔθη, ὅτι τοιαῦτα ἦν, ἐπεὶ καὶ νῦν ἐν τῇ Θετταλίᾳ περιέλκουσι περὶ τοὺς τάφους, schol. Por., Ω 15, 16 (fr. 166, ed. Teubn.); cf. schol. Por., Ψ 269 (fr. 164, ed. Teubn.). Cf. schol. Por., Γ 281: . . . ὁ δὲ ποιητῆς μιμητῆς ὄντα ὑπάρχοντα ἐποίει, ἀλλ' οὐτὰ μέλλοντα.

In the προβλήματα of the scholia this appeal to the custom receives a technical designation, ἐκ or ἀπὸ τοῦ ἔθους or ἔθει, and is a source of appeal for the removal of difficulties in passages censured as containing:

1. ἀδύνατα, schol. Por., Γ 379, E 7, K 11, K 447, ζ 221.
2. ἀπρεπῆ, schol. Por., B 8, I 203, γ 72.
3. ὑπεναντία, schol. Por., B 827, Δ 2, κ 103, 4.
4. ἄτοπα, schol. Por., Δ 297.

Περὶ δὲ τοῦ καλῶς ἢ μὴ καλῶς,¹ κ. τ. λ.

Following the treatment of the five λύσεις thus far considered, and finding its immediate occasion in what has been said of the οἶα δεῖ, is a general observation which indicates the proper method of testing the artistic merit of the speech or actions ascribed to a poetic character, the conformity of the imitation to the end of poetry: περὶ δὲ τοῦ καλῶς ἢ μὴ καλῶς ἢ εἴρηται τιμὴ ἢ πέπρακται οὐ μόνον σκεπτέον εἰς αὐτὸ τὸ πεπραγμένον ἢ εἰρημένον βλέποντα εἰ σπουδαῖον ἢ φαῦλον ἀλλὰ καὶ εἰς τὸν πράττοντα ἢ λέγοντα <ἢ>² πρὸς ὃν ἢ ὅτε ἢ ὅτῳ ἢ οὐ ἔνεκεν, οἷον εἰ μείζονος ἀγαθοῦ, ἵνα γένηται, <ἢ> μείζονος κακοῦ ἵνα ἀπογένηται, 1461 a 4-9.

Twining, Teichmüller, Vahlen and Butcher would have this remark refer solely to the morality of the poetic representation, and Teichmüller and Vahlen, following Ritter, consider it a λύσις to be applied exclusively to βλαβερά.

This is a faulty conception of the passage which is justified neither by the Poetics nor by the scholia. A proper understanding of the thought here expressed can only be gained by a study of certain technical expressions it contains, by a comparison with passages of similar import occurring elsewhere in the Poetics, and by tracing its application in ζητήματα of the scholia.

¹ Twining, vol. II, N. 239; Teichmüller, p. 154; Vahlen, p. 361 ff.; Butcher, pp. 201, 207.

² Examination of numerous applications in the scholia, in which τὸν πράττοντα ἢ λέγοντα (cf. schol. Por., A 42, B 649, Z 265, etc.) and πρὸς ὃν <sc. εἴρηται τιμὴ ἢ πέπρακται> (schol. Por., H 229, θ 564, λ 489, etc.) show themselves to be distinct objects of appeal, leads me to accept this emendation made by Dr. C. W. E. Miller to meet the requirements of the sense of the passage.

1. The terms περὶ δὲ τοῦ καλῶς ἢ μὴ καλῶς and σπουδαῖον ἢ φαῦλον must be interpreted with the aid of the rest of the Poetics.

(a). καλῶς is used repeatedly by Aristotle to express the aesthetic correctness of a poem or any of its special features; e. g., c. I, 1447 a 9, 10: καὶ πῶς δεῖ συνίστασθαι τοὺς μύθους, εἰ μέλλει καλῶς ἔξειν ἢ ποιήσις; c. VIII, 1451 a 22–24: ὁ δ' Ὀμηρος ὥσπερ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα διαφέρει καὶ τοῦτ' ἔοικεν καλῶς ἰδεῖν ἦτοι διὰ τέχνην ἢ διὰ φύσιν; c. XIII, 1453 a 12: ἀνάγκη ἄρα τὸν καλῶς ἔχοντα μῦθον ἀπλοῦν εἶναι μᾶλλον ἢ διπλοῦν; c. XIV, 1453 b 25–27: αὐτὸν δὲ εὐρίσκειν δεῖ καὶ τοῖς παραδεδομένοις χρῆσθαι καλῶς. τὸ δὲ καλῶς τί λέγομεν, εἴπωμεν; c. XXIV, 1459 b 11–13: ἔτι τὰς διανοίας καὶ τὴν λέξιν ἔχειν καλῶς · οἷς ἅπασιν Ὀμηρος κέχρηται καὶ πρῶτος καὶ ἰκανῶς. Cf. schol. Por., E 778: καλῶς τῶν βουλομένων λαθεῖν τὰ ἔχνη περιστεραῖς εἴκασεν · ἀφανῆ γὰρ αὐτῶν τὰ ἔχνη, ὡς Ἀριστοτέλης; cf. Soph., Elench., xxvi, 181 a 2. For Aristotle's definition of τὸ καλόν, see Rhet., I, 7, 1364 b 27, IX, 1366 a 33.

Further, note the phrases: ἢ μὲν οὖν κατὰ τὴν τέχνην καλλίστη τραγωδία (1453 a 21), αἱ κάλλιστα τραγωδαίαι (1453 a 19), καλλίστη δὲ ἀναγνώρισις (1452 a 33), καλλίους μύθους (1452 a 12), τὸ μὲν φαίνεται καλὸν τὸ δ' εὐτελές (1458 b 22). For Aristotelian terms expressing moral goodness and its opposite, cf. c. XIII, 1452 b 34: τοὺς ἐπιεικεῖς ἄνδρας; b 36, 7: τοὺς μοχθηροὺς; 1453 a 2: τὸν σφόδρα πονηρόν; c. XV, 1454 a 15, 16: περὶ δὲ τὰ ἦθη . . . πρῶτον ὅπως χρῆσθαι ἦ.

Hence it is evident that Aristotle uses καλός and its adverb καλῶς to express conformity to the aesthetic ideal of poetry, and not primarily in a moral sense.

(b). σπουδαῖον ἢ φαῦλον.¹

¹ On the significance of σπουδαῖος and φαῦλος, see Teichmüller, vol. II, p. 172 ff.; Butcher, p. 210 ff.

The adjectives σπουδαίος and φαῦλος, in addition to their ethical sense (c. II) and the extension of their usage to express ideal and vulgar characters in poetry (c. III, 1448 a 27; c. V, 1448 b 35, etc.) and representations serious and light (c. VI, 1449 b 24–28), are also used in a purely aesthetic sense, to express that which is excellent, or the reverse, in its kind, and that too, of objects either animate or inanimate. The following passages show this:

C. V, 1449 b 17: διόπερ ὅστις περὶ τραγωδίας οἶδε σπουδαίας καὶ φαύλης, οἶδε καὶ περὶ ἐπῶν, κ. τ. λ., ‘tragedy good and bad,’ in the purely aesthetic sense.

C. IX, 1451 b 36: τοιαῦται δὲ ποιοῦνται ὑπὸ μὲν τῶν φαύλων ποιητῶν δι’ αὐτούς, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν ἀγαθῶν διὰ τοὺς ὑποκριτάς.

C. XXIV, 1460 a 37: εἰ αὐτὰ φαῦλος ποιητῆς ποιήσειεν.

C. XXVI, 1461 b 31: οἱ φαῦλοι αὐληταί.

C. XXVI, 1462 a 9: εἶτα οὐδὲ κίνησις ἅπανα ἀποδοκιμαστέα εἶπερ μὴδ’ ὄρχησις ἀλλ’ ἢ φαύλων.

Schol. Por., K 152 ff., already cited: φαῦλη δοκεῖ εἶναι ἢ τῶν δοράτων ἐπὶ σαυρωτήρας στάσις, where φαῦλη can signify only ‘poetically bad.’

2. The passage must be studied in conjunction with other passages.

Thus, in c. IX, 1451 b 8–10, after stating that it is the poet’s business to relate not actual occurrences (τὰ γενόμενα), but what might occur (οἷα ἂν γένοιτο), Aristotle continues: ἔστιν δὲ καθόλου μὲν, τῷ ποίῳ τὰ ποῖα ἅττα συμβαίνει λέγειν ἢ πράττειν κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς ἢ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον. And in c. XV, 1454 a 33–37, after stating the four requisites in respect of character, χρὴ δὲ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἡθεσιν, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐν τῇ τῶν πραγμάτων συστάσει, αἰεὶ ζητεῖν ἢ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον ἢ τὸ εἰκὸς, ὥστε τὸν τοιοῦτον τὰ τοιαῦτα λέγειν ἢ πράττειν ἢ ἀναγκαῖον ἢ εἰκὸς, καὶ τοῦτο μετὰ τοῦτο γίνεσθαι ἢ ἀναγκαῖον ἢ εἰκὸς. Also c. XXV, 1461 b 19: ὀρθὴ δ’ ἐπιτίμησις καὶ ἀλογία καὶ μοχθηρία, ὅταν μὴ ἀνάγκης οὔσης μὴθὲν χρήσῃται τῷ ἀλόγῳ . . . ἢ τῇ πονηρίᾳ.

These passages emphasize that poetic characters should say and do what is, according to necessity or probability, right they should say or do. Accordingly, in the light of the Poetics, I render the passage under consideration as follows :

“Again, in examining whether what has been said or done by some one is poetically good or not, we must not look merely to the particular action or speech, and ask whether it is poetically good or bad (σπουδαῖον ἢ φαῦλον = καλὸν ἢ μὴ καλόν). We must also consider by whom it is done or said, or with reference to whom (πρὸς ὅν), or when (ὅτε), or in whose interest (ὄφρ),¹ or for what end (οὗ ἕνεκεν); whether, for instance, for the sake of gaining some greater good or averting some greater evil.”

Speech or action, the observation teaches, must be interpreted in the light of all the circumstances—the persons, the occasion, the end it is designed to serve; and if, from a study of these, the speech or action shows itself to be in accordance with necessity or probability, then its artistic excellence—and this is ever supreme with Aristotle—is assured. Morality enters into consideration only as implied in the aesthetic ideal.

3. That this interpretation is correct is evident from certain scholia containing explanations of Aristotle, in which the relativity emphasized in the above remark is made the ground of explanation. In all these passages objection is made to some speech or action as falling short of the σπουδαῖον or the βέλτιον, and Aristotle invalidates the various objections by showing that what was said or done was what, according to necessity or probability, ought to have been said or done, appealing to one of the features specified—the τὸν πράττοντα ἢ λέγοντα or the πρὸς ὅν, or the ὄτε or the ὄφρ ἢ οὗ ἕνεκεν.

In schol. Por., H 93 (fr. 156, ed. Teubn.), it is enquired why Menelaos, at first so eager to fight, was afterwards not among the nine who presented themselves for single combat : . . . φησὶ δὲ ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης, ὅτι ἄπαξ ἀκούσας “μηδ’ ἔθειλ’ ἐξ ἔριδος σεῦ ἀμείνονι φωτὶ μάχεσθαι” Ἐκτορι” (v. 111) οὐκ ἔμελλεν αὐθις ἀνίστασθαι, . . . καὶ ὅτι ἤδη μονομαχίσας ἐτύγχανεν Ἀλεξάνδρῳ καὶ οὐ καλῶς ἀπαλλάξας, καὶ νεωστὶ ἐτέτρωτο ὑπὸ

¹ On the sense of ὄφρ, see Vahlen, p. 362.

Πανδάρου, καὶ ὅτι ἀποκινδυνεύειν τοῦτον οὐκ ἐχρῆν ἐν ᾧ τὸ τέλος ἤρτητο τοῦ πολέμου. Here we have an appeal to the τὸν πράττοντα and the ὅτε in answer to a charge of cowardice made against Menelaos.

Again, schol. Por., η 258 (fr. 178, ed. Teubn.), in response to the inquiry why Odysseus did not accept immortality when offered him by Kalypso: . . . Ἀριστοτέλης μὲν οὖν πρὸς τοὺς Φαίακας φησι ταῦτα λέγειν Ὀδυσσεά, ἵνα σεμνότερος φαίνεται καὶ μᾶλλον ἄλλων σπουδάσαι πάντων τὸν νόστον· συνέφερε γὰρ αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸ θάπτον ἀποσταλῆναι, κ.τ.λ. In this is an appeal to the οὐ ἔνεκεν, οἶον εἰ μείζονος ἀγαθοῦ, ἵνα γένηται.

Finally, in schol. Por., μ 374, 75 (fr. 149, ed. Teubn.), it is enquired why the poet who says that Helios sees everything and hears everything, should represent him as needing a messenger to inform him about his oxen (μ 374, 75): . . . λύων δὲ Ἀριστοτέλης φησὶν, . . . ἀρμόττον ἦν εἰπεῖν οὕτως τὸν τε Ἀγαμέμνονα, ὀρκίζοντα ἐν τῇ μονομαχίᾳ ὅτι “Ἡἑλιος, ὃς πάντ’ ἐφορᾷς καὶ πάντ’ ἐπακούεις,” καὶ τὸν Ὀδυσσεά πρὸς τοὺς ἐταίρους λέγοντα . . . κ.τ.λ. Here we have an appeal to the ὅτε and the πρὸς ὃν in answer to a ὑπεναντίον. See further schol. Por., Η 229, θ 564, Ζ 265, π 188.¹

When we consider the further application of this principle of relativity in the scholia, we find that it is usually employed in answer to strictures on the speeches and actions of Homeric heroes, and that the τὸν πράττοντα ἢ λέγοντα < ἢ > πρὸς ὃν and the ὅτε ἢ ὅτῳ ἢ οὐ ἔνεκεν, κ. τ. λ., have separated and a technical designation has been given to the application of each—

¹ I do not consider the observation one of the twelve λύσεις, as Ritter and Teichmüller and Vahlen, for the following reasons: (1) It is not illustrated by an example, as the λύσεις proper are without exception; (2) it accords in manner of statement rather with the general remarks (δλως δέ, 1461 b 9 ff.) at the close of the chapter, especially the remark concerning τὰ ὑπεναντία ὡς εἰρημένα, than with any of the special λύσεις; (3) in its general import and in its application in the scholia, it appeals to the first λύσις of the End of Poetry, or to the third λύσις of Poetic Truth or aesthetic idealization in the imitation of characters of the higher type.

to the first ἐκ or ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου or προσώπῳ, to the second ἐκ or ἀπὸ τοῦ καιροῦ or καιρῶ.

(a). Ἐκ τοῦ προσώπου.

The appeal to the τὸν πράττοντα ἢ λέγοντα <ἢ> πρὸς ὃν is closely interwoven with the Aristotelian doctrine of μίμησις. It studies the appositeness of speeches and actions to the persons in any way involved, and in this manner is appealed to for the explanation of ἀπρεπή, ἄλογα and ὑπεναντία. Thus the ἀπρεπές that Odysseus should speak of good cheer and feasting as the summuum bonum, λύεται . . . ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου· πρὸς οὓς λέγει, αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἦσαν οἱ φάσκοντες “αἰεὶ δ’ ἡμῖν δαῖς τε φίλη κίθαρὶς τε χοροὶ τε” (θ 248), schol. Por., ι 5.

And in schol. Por., Δ 2, the ὑπεναντίον seen in representing both Ganymede and Hebe as cup-bearers of the gods (Δ 2, Υ 234), is solved: προσώπῳ δέ, ὅτι τὸ μὲν ἐκ τοῦ ποιητοῦ λέγεται, τὸ δὲ ἐξ Αἰνείου, ὃν εἰκὸς μεγαλύνειν τὸ αὐτοῦ γένος.

Ἐκ τοῦ προσώπου is used for the solution of:

ἀπρεπή, schol. Por., Α 42, ζ 244, ι 5, λ 489.

ἄλογα, schol. Por., Γ 122, Μ 25, χ 412.

ὑπεναντία,¹ schol. Por., Β 649, Δ 2, Ζ 265, Ζ 488, Ξ 434, Ψ 71, Ω 527, etc.

¹ In the treatment of ὑπεναντία, ἐκ τοῦ προσώπου received a special development, as is indicated by the following passages:

Schol. Por., Ζ 265 (assigned by Schrader, Epileg., p. 191, to the Peripatetics, and evidently from Aristotle himself): . . . οὐδὲν δὲ θαυμαστὸν εἰ παρὰ τῷ ποιητῇ ἐναντία λέγεται ὑπὸ διαφόρων φωνῶν. ὅσα μὲν γὰρ ἔφη αὐτὸς ἀφ’ ἑαυτοῦ ἐξ ἰδίου προσώπου, ταῦτα δεῖ ἀκόλουθα εἶναι καὶ μὴ ἐναντία ἀλλήλοις· ὅσα δὲ προσώποις περιτίθῃσιν, οὐκ αὐτοῦ εἰσὶν ἀλλὰ τῶν λεγόντων νοεῖται, ὅθεν καὶ ἐπιδέχεται πολλακίς διαφωνίαν, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐν τούτοις.

Schol. Por., Ζ 488 (evidently from the same source): . . . ἄλλως τε οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ ποιητοῦ οἱ λόγοι, ἐκ προσώπων δὲ διαφόρων εἰς μίμησιν παραληφθέντων. ποτὲ μὲν γὰρ λέγει πρὸς Ἀνδρομάχην ὁ Ἐκτωρ, ποτὲ δὲ ὁ Ζεὺς· διαφωνεῖν δὲ πρὸς ἄλληλα οὐδὲν ἀπεικὸς τὰ διάφορα πρόσωπα.

Schol. Por., Β 649: . . . Ἀριστοτέλης δὲ οὐκ ἄποπὸν φησιν, εἰ μὴ πάντες τὰ αὐτὰ λέγοντες πεποίηται αὐτῷ· οὕτως γὰρ καὶ ἄλλοις τὰ αὐτὰ παντελῶς λέγειν ὄφειλον.

(b). Ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ.

καιρός,¹ which signifies literally 'precision,' 'the instinct of drawing a line, as it were, at the right place,' has in it, beyond the mere time element, an element expressing measure, seasonableness, appropriateness, opportuneness. It is the term which most fully designates the 'Hellenic obedience to the sense of fitness or measure.' Ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ, accordingly, is an apt phrase to express the study of the ὅτε ἢ ὅτῳ ἢ οὐ ἔνεκεν, κ.τ.λ., in the criticism of aesthetic correctness in the actions and speeches of poetic characters.

We have already observed how the fundamental notions in καιρός, the ὅτε and the ὅτῳ ἢ οὐ ἔνεκεν, were appealed to by Aristotle in the explanation of difficulties. In other λύσεις of the scholia, not ascribed by name to Aristotle, they also play a great rôle under the technical designation ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ, at one time the 'time' element being the source of appeal, at another the occasion. For instance, the ὑπεναντίου treated in schol. Por., B 848, that Pyraichmes is here announced as general of the Paionians, while in Φ 140 Asteropaïos is their leader is explained: τῷ καιρῷ · τὸν γὰρ Ἀστεροπαῖον οὐκ ἀπεικὸς χρονίζοντος τοῦ πολέμου ἐλθεῖν ἄγοντα πάλιν τινὰς τῶν Παιόνων, where the 'time' is the ground of explanation. Cf. schol. Por., Δ 2, Τ 329, μ 374. And the ἀπρεπές that Phoinix should tell the story of his intercourse with his father's concubine is explained by some ἀπὸ τοῦ καιροῦ, ὅτι τὰς παλλακίδας διαβάλλει πρὸς τὸν Ἀχιλλεῖα ἔνεκα τῆς Βρισηΐδος χαλεπαίνοντα, schol. Por., I 452. Cf. schol. Por., A 18, A 31.

The varied application of ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ is shown by the following:

Schol. Por., μ 3, 4: . . . οὐ μόνον δέ ἐστι βίαιον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐναντίον τῷ ποιητῇ · οὐ γὰρ παραδίδωσιν δ' Ὀμηρος τοὺς ἥρωας ἐπισταμένους, ὅτι ἐξ Ὀκκεανοῦ αἱ ἀνατολαὶ τοῦ ἡλίου, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς ἐκ τοῦ ἰδίου προσώπου τὸ τοιοῦτον παρέδωκεν, κ. τ. λ.

Cf. schol. Por., Ξ 434, θ 63, ι 275, 76.

¹ 'Es ist also überhaupt der rechte Moment, momentum rei d. h. das worauf es ankommt, was den Anschlag gibt, was man richtig trifft.' Schmidt, Syn. d. Griech. Sprache, II, 44, 9.

1. ἄλογα explained ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ, schol. Por., A 420, Γ 315, 16, Γ 365, K 194, M 25.

2. ἀπρεπῆ, schol. Por., A 18, A 42, I 186, I 203, I 453, I 591, ι 5, λ 489.

3. ὑπεναντία, schol. Por., B 848, Δ 2, γ 20, γ 147, μ 374.

4. An ἀδύνατον, schol. Por., Γ 379.

5. An ἄτοπον, schol. Por., I 591.

6. An ἀσύμφορον, schol. Por., Τ 67 ff.

C. Λύσεις from a consideration of the means of representation.

Other objections, proceeds Aristotle, must be solved by a consideration of the linguistic expression.¹ Here the λέξεις, laid down in the general εἶδη as the means of representation, finds its application. There are various λύσεις classified under λέξεις, and a greater fullness of examples is offered than has heretofore been given. Why this should be so is evident from the scholia, where the interpretation of the linguistic expression shows itself to have been the readiest and most frequently applied means for the solution of προβλήματα. The technical designation of this solution is ἐκ τῆς λέξεως and similar forms. Vahlen² confines its application to one of the ἐπιτιμήματα, the ὑπεναντίον, in its two phases, as expressing the contradictory to something the poet himself says or the contradictory to 'what is tacitly assumed by a person of intelligence.' That this is a mistaken view is evident by its varied application in the scholia, where ἐκ τῆς λέξεως is used to explain :

1. ἀδύνατα, schol. Por., Γ 144, Δ 105, Δ 491, E 7, H 9, Θ 555.

2. ἄλογα, schol. Por., A 62, Γ 121, Γ 365, E 341, M 25, χ 412.

3. ὑπεναντία, schol. Por., A 3, B 844, Δ 105, E 576, Ξ 434, O 189, ζ 221, η 54, η 64, ι 25, μ 374.

4. ἀπρεπῆ, schol. Por., A 31, A 42, A 211, B 8, B 82, E 778, I 453, ι 5.

5. ἀσύμφορα, schol. Por., Z 234, Λ 405, ι 106.

6. ἄτοπα, schol. Por., Δ 297.

¹1461 a 9, 10: τὰ δὲ πρὸς τὴν λέξιν ὁρῶντα δεῖ διαλύειν. Cf. Soph. El., c. IV, 165 b 23.

² Beitr., p. 363.

These passages supplement the illustrations of the various λύσεις in the Poetics, which Aristotle treats in the following order (1461 a 9–b 10):

VI. Γλώττη,¹ i. e., a solution based on the acceptance of a rare term, the antique or dialectical meaning of a word.

Of this, three examples are offered: 1. To the objection to A 50, οὐρῆας μὲν πρῶτον, as shown by the scholia, that Apollo's arrows should first hit mules and dogs and afterwards the men, Aristotle offers the possible explanation that οὐρῆας has here not its usual sense of 'mules,' but its rare sense (γλώττη) of 'sentinels.' 2. Objection was made to K 316 (where Dolon, who presents himself to perform Hektor's commission, is described, "ὄς δὴ τοι εἶδος μὲν ἔην κακός, ἀλλὰ ποδώκης"), most probably on the ground that, as swift-footedness would presuppose a symmetrical bodily structure, the line presented an inconsistency. Aristotle offers the odd explanation that the expression did not signify ill-shaped in body, but ugly in visage, for the Cretans use the word εὐειδές, 'well-favored,' to denote a fair face—thus understanding εἶδος not as a κύριον ὄνομα, but as a γλώττα. 3. I 202 ff. offers a third example, where Achilles, after receiving his unexpected guests, gives the command to Patroklos:

μείζονα δὴ κρητῆρα, Μενουτίου υἱέ, καθίστα, ζωρότερον δὲ κέραιε, δέπας δ' ἔντυνον ἐκάστω, κ. τ. λ.

The objection made to this is evident from the scholium, which contains an explanation practically the same as that of the Poetics: ἀπρεπές· ὡς γὰρ ἐπὶ κῶμον ἤκουσιν ἀκρατότερον διδόναι παρακελεύεται. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἀπὸ τῆς λέξεως λύουσι· τὸ γλώττα has been treated in c. XXI, 1457 b 4 ff.

¹ 1461 a 10–16: οἷον γλώττη "οὐρῆας μὲν πρῶτον." ἴσως γὰρ οὐ τοὺς ἡμίονους λέγει ἀλλὰ τοὺς φύλακας, καὶ τὸν Δόλωνα "ὄς β' ἦ τοι εἶδος μὲν ἔην κακός" οὐ τὸ σῶμα ἀσύμμετρον ἀλλὰ τὸ πρόσωπον αἰσχροῦν, τὸ γὰρ εὐειδές οἱ Κρήτες εὐπρόσωπον καλοῦσι, καὶ τὸ "ζωρότερον δὲ κέραιε" οὐ τὸ ἄκρατον ὡς οἰνόφλυξιν ἀλλὰ τὸ θάπτον.

γὰρ ζωρότερον εἶναι τάχιον. Aristotle removes the difficulty by understanding 'ζωρότερον' not as ἄκρατον, but as θᾶπτον, a rare use of the term. Cf. Plut., Symp., v, 4.

VII. Κατὰ μεταφοράν,¹ i. e., a solution by an appeal to metaphor.

Aristotle offers two illustrations of explanations by means of metaphor: τὸ δὲ κατὰ μεταφοράν εἴρηται, οἷον "ἄλλοι μὲν ῥα θεοὶ τε καὶ ἄνθρωποι Εὐδὸν παννύχιοι." ἅμα δὲ φησιν "ἢ τοι ὄτ' ἐς πεδίον τὸ Τρωικὸν ἀθρήσειεν, Αὐλῶν συρίγγων θ' ὄμαδον." τὸ γὰρ πάντες ἀντὶ < τοῦ > πολλοὶ κατὰ μεταφοράν εἴρηται, τὸ γὰρ πᾶν πολὺ τι· καὶ τὸ "οἴη δ' ἄμμορος" κατὰ μεταφοράν, τὸ γὰρ γνωριμώτατον μόνον, 1461 a 16-21.

In the first illustration there exists much confusion. The second of the citations, ἢ τοι ὄτ' ἐς πεδίον, κ. τ. λ., is read K 11 ff., of which Aristotle cites only so much as is important for his purpose, while the first is found in B 1 ff., the unnecessary epithet ἵπποκορυσταί being purposely omitted. On this account Vahlen² holds that Aristotle could only have meant the beginning of K when he quoted the similarly sounding beginning of B.³

¹The term μεταφορά, as used by Aristotle, included every transfer of a word from its natural sense. Cf. c. XXI, 1457 b 6 ff.: μεταφορὰ δὲ ἐστὶν ὀνόματος ἀλλοτρίου ἐπιφορὰ ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ γένους ἐπὶ εἶδος ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ εἶδους ἐπὶ τὸ γένος ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ εἶδους ἐπὶ εἶδος ἢ κατὰ τὸ ἀνάλογον. The four forms mentioned in this passage are included, in a general way, in the figures adopted by later rhetoricians in addition to metaphor, viz.: synecdoche, metonymy, katachresis and metalepsis. Synecdoche corresponds roughly to the first two—embracing metonymy, which stands for many uses of the second,—metalepsis represents the third, katachresis the fourth. Volkmann recognizes only the last of Aristotle's divisions as true metaphor. See Volkmann, Rhetorik d. Griechen u. Römer, p. 417 ff.; Blass, Hermeneutik und Kritik, p. 193.

²Beitr., p. 365 ff.

³Römer, p. 278 ff., who shows that Aristotle cited Homeric passages from memory, and, following Spengel, that σφάλματα μνημονικά are no rarity in his writings, cites an interesting parallel to the above case by a comparison

Now between the beginning of K and the verses 11 ff., there is absolutely no inconsistency to be recognized; and, even if the first lines of B, undoubtedly cited by Aristotle, be understood, there is nothing in them to which the solution τὸ γὰρ πάντες ἀντὶ τοῦ πολλοί κατὰ μεταφορὰν εἴρηται can answer, as no πάντες is present in the text.

After rejecting certain attempts to remove the difficulty, Vahlen says there remain two views worthy of consideration—either Aristotle wrote πάντες μὲν ῥα θεοί, κ. τ. λ., and ἄλλοι has crept from the Homeric into the Aristotelian text, or the solution τὸ γὰρ πάντες ἀντὶ τοῦ πολλοί, κ. τ. λ., refers not to the passages cited, but to another citation, which, along with the solution of the first citations, has been lost from the Aristotelian text. Vahlen inclines to the former view, that the Homeric ἄλλοι has displaced πάντες written by Aristotle, the restoration of which brings clearness and coherence into the passage. Christ and Butcher, following Gräfenhan, adopt πάντες in their texts.

I cite in confirmation of Vahlen's view schol. Por., ^{Σ 13}Ξ 304, which gives evidence of Peripatetic origin: . . . ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐπὶ τῶν ἡγεμόνων τῶν Ἀχαιῶν εἰπὼν ὅτι πάντες ἐκάθειδον—“ἄλλοι μὲν παρὰ νησὶν ἀριστῆες Παναχαιῶν εὕδον παννύχιοι” (K 1)—ὄμως ποιεῖ τὸν Ἀγαμέμνονα ἐγρηγορότα καὶ τὸν Μενέλαον—“οὐδὲ γὰρ αὐτῷ ὕπνος ἐπὶ βλεφάροισιν ἔπιπτεν” (K 25)—οὕτως ἐκ τοῦ πλείστου τὸ πάντας ἠκολουθηκέναι τοὺς θεοὺς τῷ Διὶ εἴρηκεν.

The formula τὸ γὰρ πάντες ἀντὶ <τοῦ> πολλοί occurs frequently in the scholia in explanation of ὑπεναντία, as e. g.:

of Pol., III, 14, 1285 a 9 ff., and Nikom. Eth., III, 11, 1116 a 34. In the latter passage, ἀναγκάζουσι γὰρ οἱ κύριοι ὥσπερ δ' Ἐκτωρ

“ὅν δέ κ' ἐγὼν ἀπάνευθε μάχης πτώσσοντα νοήσω οἳ οἱ
ἄρκιον ἐσσεῖται φυγέειν κύνας,”

Aristotle has cited B 391 ff., when he meant to cite O 348 ff.

1. Schol. Por., Ξ 304, treating the ὑπεναντίον between A 424 and A 104: . . . καὶ διὰ τί φήσας πάντας τοὺς θεοὺς εἰς Αἰθιοπίαν ἐληλυθέναι, “θεοὶ δ’ ἅμα πάντες ἔποντο,” τὴν Ἀθηναίαν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ φησιν ἐλθεῖν παρὰ τῆς Ἥρας πρὸς τὸν Ἀχιλλεῖα; μήποτε δὲ συλληπτικῶς εἴρηται ἀπὸ τοῦ πλείστου τὸ πᾶν. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐπὶ τῶν ἡγεμόνων τῶν Ἀχαιῶν εἰπὼν ὅτι πάντες ἐκάθειδον, κ.τ.λ.

2. Schol. Por., μ 374, 75¹ (fr. 149, ed. Teubn.): μ 374 ff., representing long-robed Lampetia bearing word to Helios about the slaughter of his kine, is considered ἐναντίον to Ἡέλιός θ’ ὅς πάντ’ ἐφορᾶς καὶ πάντ’ ἐπακούεις, Γ 277, as he ought to know it without being informed, λύοιτο δ’ ἂν . . . τῇ λέξει· τὸ γὰρ πάντα δηλοῖ τὰ πλείστα.

3. Schol. Por., O 189 ff.: Referring to Poseidon’s account of the division of territory between Zeus, himself and Hades (O 189 ff.), δοκεῖ ἐναντιοῦσθαι πρὸς τὸ πάντα (“τριχθὰ δὲ πάντα δέδασται,” O 189) τὸ “γαῖα δ’ ἔτι ξυνη πάντων” (O 193)· οὐ γὰρ ἔτι πάντα δέδασται τούτων μὴ δεδασμένων. λύοιτο δ’ ἂν τῇ λέξει· . . . ἀντὶ τοῦ πλείστα· συνεχῶς γὰρ τὸ πάντα ἐπὶ τοῦ πλεονάζοντος τίθεται· ὡς εἰ ἔλεγεν· τὰ πλείονα μεμέρισται πλὴν γῆς τε καὶ οὐρανοῦ· ταῦτα γὰρ ἔτι κοινά.

4. Schol. Por., Ξ 434: ἐναντίον δοκεῖ τὸ ἅμα μὲν φάναι “Ξάνθου δινηέντος, ὃν ἀθάνατος τέκετο Ζεὺς,” ἅμα δὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ Ὠκεανοῦ φάναι (Φ 196)· “ἔξ οὐπερ πάντες ποταμοὶ καὶ πᾶσα θάλασσα.” λύοιτο δ’ ἂν ἐκ τῆς λέξεως καθ’ ἑκάτερα· καὶ γὰρ τὸ πάντες δύναται λέγειν ἀντὶ τοῦ πλείους, κ.τ.λ.

5. Schol. Por., B 649 (fr. 146, ed. Teubn.): The contradiction in the statements concerning Crete in B 649 (Κρήτην ἐκατόμπολιν) and τ 174 (ἐν δ’ ἄνθρωποι πολλοὶ ἀπειρέσιοι καὶ ἐννήκοντα πόλῆες) receives, among others, the explanation: μήποτε δὲ καὶ μεταφορὰ ἐστὶ τὰ ἑκατόν, ὡς ἐκ “τῆς ἑκατόν ¹On the Peripatetic nature of this passage of the scholia, see Schrader, Epilog., p. 184, n. 1.

θύσανοι" (B 448)· οὐ γὰρ ἑκατὸν ἦσαν ἀριθμῶ . . . ἤτοι οὖν ἐκεῖ τὸ ἑκατὸν ἀντὶ τοῦ πολλοῦ κείται, ὡς "τῆς ἑκατὸν θύσανοι."¹

A second example of a difficulty removed by means of a metaphorical explanation is offered by Σ 489, where it is said of the Bear which, along with other stars, Hephaistos wrought in the shield of Achilles:

οἷη δ' ἄμμορός ἐστι λοετρῶν Ὀκεανοῖο.

The scholia show the nature of the objection: . . . κατηγοροῦσι μὲν γὰρ κατὰ τὸν περὶ τῆς Ἀρκτου λόγον φάσκοντος "οἷη δ' ἄμμορός ἐστι λοετρῶν Ὀκεανοῖο," καθόλου γὰρ πάντα τὰ ἐν τῷ ἀρκτικῷ μὴ δύναιν—a censure of Homer's ignorance of astronomy, in asserting as true of the Bear alone what is true also of other stars. Aristotle explains that οἷη, 'alone,' is to be understood as used metaphorically for that which is best known, for the best known may be called the only one (τὸ γὰρ γνωριμώτατον μόνον).

Other solutions in the scholia based on an appeal to metaphor are as follows: 1. ὑπεναντία, schol. Por., Δ 105–111, E 576, E 741, P 125; 2. ἀδύνατα, schol. Por., E 7, K 11.

VIII. Κατὰ προσφῶδιαν, i. e., a solution by a change in accent or breathing.

The examples under προσφῶδια—κατὰ δὲ προσφῶδιαν, ὥσπερ Ἰππίας ἔλυνεν ὁ Θάσιος τὸ "δίδομεν δέ οἱ" καὶ "τὸ μὲν οὖν καταπύθεται ὄμβρῳ," 1461 a 21–23—are treated more fully, without mention of the name of Hippias, in Soph. El., c. IV, 166 b 1 ff.²

¹ Cf. Poet., 1457 b 11 ff.: [μεταφορὰ] ἀπ' εἶδους δὲ ἐπὶ γένος "ἦ δὴ μυρὶ Ὀδυσσεὺς ἐσθλὰ ἔοργεν·" τὸ γὰρ μυρίον πολὺ ἐστίν, ἧ νῦν ἀντὶ τοῦ πολλοῦ κέχρηται.

Schrader, Epileg., p. 182, accepts the view of Römer (p. 287), that Aristotelica continue through this explanation. It is worthy of note that Ἡρακλείδης μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλοι are mentioned earlier in the scholion, and that the explanation quoted accords with the Peripatetic schol. κ 252: . . . ἄλλοι δὲ φασὶν ἔθος ἔχειν τοὺς ποιητὰς τῷ ἀπηρτισμένῳ χρῆσθαι ἀριθμῷ, κ. τ. λ.

² Παρὰ δὲ τὴν προσφῶδιαν ἐν μὲν τοῖς ἀνευ γραφῆς διαλεκτικοῖς οὐ βῆδιον ποιῆσαι λόγον, ἐν δὲ τοῖς γεγραμμένοις καὶ ποιήμασι μᾶλλον, οἷον καὶ τὸν Ὀμηρον ἔνιοι διορθοῦνται πρὸς τοὺς ἐλέγχοντας ὡς ἀτόπως εἰρηκότα "Τὸ μὲν οὖν καταπύθεται

The first expression, δίδομεν δέ οί, as the Soph. El. shows, must have referred to the beginning of B, and Vahlen concludes that in Aristotle's copy of Homer was read in B 15, "Ἡρῆ λισσομένη, δίδομεν δέ οί εὖχος ἀρέσθαι. To this passage objection was made that Zeus appears as a liar and a deceiver, and Hippias sought to set this aside, 'acumine artibus Loyolae digno,'¹ by the change of accent from δίδομεν to διδόμεν, an infinitive used as an imperative; so that Zeus only commands the dream to entice Agamemnon with vain hopes, etc. Through this cunning artifice the blame is rolled off the shoulders of Zeus on the ὄνειρος.

As to the second example, it is evident from the Soph. El. that some took exception to the awkwardness (ἀτόπως) of the expression τὸ μὲν οὖ (= οὖ τὸ μὲν) in Ψ 328—ἔστηκε ξύλον αὖτον . . . τὸ μὲν οὖ καταπύθεται ὄμβροφ—and Hippias overcame this by changing the οὖ into οὐ, and this gained for the passage a proper sense. Worthy of note for the conception of προσφδία, as showing that it includes also a change in breathing, is Soph. El., 177 b 3. See, also, 169 a 27, 177 b 35, 179 a 14, quoted by Vahlen, p. 368 f.

IX. Διαιρέσει, i. e., a solution by a change in punctuation.

A related point of view is the solution through διαίσεις, i. e., through punctuation, the separation or grouping of words. Vahlen cites, as clarifying its meaning, Soph. El., 166 a 35, 177 b 10 ff.; Rhet., II, 24, 1401 a 24 ff., III, 9, 1409 b 10 ff.

The example cited in the Poetics (1461 a 23–25) is a verse of Empedokles: τὰ δὲ διαιρέσει, οἶον Ἐμπεδοκλῆς "αἴψα δὲ θνήτ' ἐφύοντο, τὰ πρὶν μάθον ἀθάνατα Ζωρά τε πρὶν κέκρητο" (Mullach, fr. 202). On the variants in citations of this passage and the ἐπιτίμημα here to be understood, see Vahlen, p.

ὄμβροφ." λούσι γὰρ αὐτὸ τῇ προσφδίᾳ, λέγοντες τὸ οὖ ἄξιτερον. καὶ τὸ περὶ τὸ ἐνύπνιον τοῦ Ἀγαμέμνονος, ὅτι οὐκ αὐτὸς ὁ Ζεὺς εἶπεν "δίδομεν δέ οί εὖχος ἀρέσθαι," ἀλλὰ τῷ ἐνυπνίῳ ἐνετέλλετο διδόναι. τὰ μὲν οὖν τοιαῦτα παρὰ τὴν προσφδίαν ἐστίν.

¹ Wolf, Proleg., c. CLXVIII.

370 f. It turns on the possibility of understanding one of two punctuations—either θνήτ' ἐφύοντο τὰ πρὶν μάθον ἀθάνατα ζωρά τε, πρὶν κέκρητο, or θνήτ' ἐφύοντο τὰ πρὶν μάθον ἀθάνατα, ζωρά τε πρὶν, κέκρητο. It is clear how, through different union and separation of the words, the sense of the passage is very considerably varied.

We see from the λύσεις κατὰ προσφῶδιαν and διαίρεσει that some difficulties were removed not by interpretation of the terms or phrases causing the difficulty, but by some change in the traditional text.

Whatever may be our views as to ἡ ἐκ νάρθηκος ἔκδοσις, there is abundance of evidence in the scholia (e. g., Φ 252, ε 334, κ 176, etc.) and elsewhere that Aristotle made critical comments¹ on the text of Homer, and that in this he was followed by the Peripatetics (e. g., schol. Dind., M 231, T 62, Ψ 94, ζ 106). Hence it is not out of place to cite here certain ἐπιτιμήματα treated in scholia betraying Peripatetic influence, to which are given explanations based on a criticism of the text, in a manner similar to those treated under προσφῶδια and διαίρεσις.

1. In the scholia to Σ 489, οἷη δ' ἄμμορός ἐστι λοετρῶν Ὀκεανοῖο, already considered (p. 45), we read: κἂν διαιρηῆται δὲ οἱ, εἶτα "ἡ δ' ἄμμορός ἐστι λοετρῶν Ὀκεανοῖο," κατὰ λέξιν ἢ λύσις ὑπάρχει.

2. Schol. Por., ε 334 (fr. 171, ed. Teubn.): . . . ζητεῖ γὰρ ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης, διὰ τί τὴν Καλυψῶ καὶ τὴν Κίρκην καὶ τὴν Ἴνῶ ἀυδήσσας λέγει μόνας · πᾶσαι γὰρ καὶ αἱ ἄλλαι φωνὴν εἶχον · καὶ λύσαι μὲν οὐ βεβούληται, μεταγράφει δὲ ποτὲ μὲν εἰς τὸ ἀυλήσσαι, ἐξ οὗ δηλοῦσθαι φησιν ὅτι μονοῦδοι ἦσαν, ἐπὶ δὲ τῆς Ἴνουῦς οὐδέησσαι · κ.τ.λ. . . . ὁ δὲ Ἀριστοτέλης οὐδέησσαν γράφει, οἰονεὶ ἐπίγειος. οὕτως καὶ Χαμαιλέων.

See further schol. Por., A 63, λ 239, for the treatment of certain cases of ὑπεναντία by textual criticism.

¹ La Roche, Hom. Textkritik, Leipzig, 1886, pp. 7–49; Ludwich, Aristarchs Hom. Textkritik, Leipzig, 1884, I, p. 67.

X. Ἀμφιβολία, i. e., a solution by a study of the ambiguity of an expression.

Closely related to διαίρεσις is ἀμφιβολία, the next method of solution mentioned: τὰ δὲ ἀμφιβολία, “παρώχῃκεν δὲ πλέων νύξ” · τὸ γὰρ πλείω ἀμφιβολόν ἐστίν, 1461 a 25 f.

On the usage of ἀμφιβολία in dialectic, see Soph. El., c. IV, 166 a 6 ff.; and on its close connection with διαίρεσις, Topica, 145 b 22–30. The distinction between διαίρεσις and ἀμφιβολία is that διαίρεσις indicates such ambiguity as arises from the different senses of a passage due to different punctuation, while ἀμφιβολία is the ambiguity arising from the different senses of which two or more words are capable in consequence of their grammatical relations.

The passage quoted is from K 251 ff.:

ἀλλ' ἴομεν · μάλα γὰρ νύξ ἄνεται, ἐγγύθι δ' ἠώς ἄστρα δὲ δὴ προβέβηκε, παρώχῃκεν δὲ πλέων νύξ τῶν δύο μοιράων, τριτάτη δ' ἔτι μοῖρα λέλειπται.

As is shown by the scholia to the passage, the ἐπιτίμημα was the contradiction existing between the last two clauses. Aristotle's explanation is also preserved by Porphyry. It was, in brief, that Homer did not say that more than two parts of the night had passed by, with which the statement that the third part yet remained would be contradictory; the words are rather to be interpreted that, of the two parts (or halves) into which the night falls, the greater part (or the greater half) has passed by, and this indefinite statement of the time is more accurately determined by the additional clause, τριτάτη δ' ἔτι μοῖρα λέλειπται. Hence the πλέων clause is ambiguous, and an objection which is due to an interpretation based on one of the possibilities of meaning is removed by the acceptance of the other possibility present in the ἀμφιβολία.

XI. Κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως, i. e., a solution by an appeal to the custom of speech.

The language of the Poetics, in which Aristotle states this λύσις, is badly confused, and has presented much difficulty to commentators. It is given by Vahlen as follows: τὰ δὲ κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως · < ὅσα > τῶν κεκραμένων οἶνόν φασιν εἶναι, ὅθεν πεποίηται “ κνημὶς νεοτεύκτου κασσιτέριοι,” καὶ χαλκίας τοὺς τὸν σίδηρον ἐργαζομένους, ὅθεν εἴρηται ὁ Γανυμήδης Διὶ οἴνοχοεῦει, οὐ πινόντων οἶνον. εἴη δ' ἂν τοῦτό γε < καὶ > κατὰ μεταφοράν, 1461 a 27–30.¹

Vahlen, following an early editor, transposes the ὅθεν εἴρηται ὁ Γαν. clause to the position after φασιν εἶναι, and understands the first clause, ‘everything that belongs to the mixed drinks is called (according to the ἔθος λέξεως) wine’²—which finds its application in the statement—‘hence of Ganymede it is said “Διὶ οἴνοχοεῦει” (Δ 3, T 234), although the gods do not drink wine (E 341), but nectar.’ Thus, from a consideration of a popular usage of οἶνον to embrace all mixed drinks, the statement that Ganymede ‘Διὶ οἴνοχοεῦει’ is justified as not contradictory with the statement that the gods “οὐ πίνουσ’ αἴθοπα οἶνον” (E 341).

The clause, < ὅσα > τῶν κεκραμένων οἶνόν φασιν εἶναι, as it implies that likewise nectar belongs to the mixed drinks, is inconsistent with the Aristotelian scholium ε 93 (fr. 170, ed. Teubn.): εἰ μὴδὲν ἄλλο πίνουσιν οἱ θεοὶ ἢ τὸ νέκταρ (E 341), διὰ τί αὐτὸ ἢ Καλυψὼ τῷ Ἑρμῇ κέρασασα δίδωσιν; εἰ γὰρ κεκέρασαι σὺν ὕδατι, οὐ μόνον τὸ νέκταρ, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὕδωρ πίνουσιν. καίτοι, φησὶ, ψιλὴν ἀμβροσίαν παρέθηκεν, “κέρασσε δὲ νέκταρ ἐρυθρόν.” λύων οὖν ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης τὸ κέρασσε φησὶν ἦτοι τὸ μίξαι ἄλλο ἄλλω ὑγρῷ δηλοῖ ἢ τὸ ἐγχεῖν · ἄμφω γὰρ δηλοῖ τὸ κέρασαι. νῦν οὖν τὸ “κέρασσε δὲ νέκταρ ἐρυθρόν” οὐ τὸ μίξαι δηλοῖ, ἀλλὰ ψιλῶς ἐγχεῖν.

¹ See, on the interpretation of this passage, Wachsmuth, De Ar. stud. Hom., p. 29 ff., who endeavors to justify the present order, and Vahlen, p. 372 ff. and p. 419 f., who shows the untenableness of Wachsmuth's interpretation and presents many arguments in favor of his own, which is here adopted. Butcher emends, τῶν κεκραμένων < ἔνια > οἶνόν φασιν εἶναι.

² Cf. Plut. Mor., 140 F.: ὡσπερ τὸ κρᾶμα, καίτοι ὕδατος μετέχον πλείονος, οἶνον καλοῦμεν, κ. τ. λ., which indicates how widespread was this popular usage of οἶνον.

Vahlen holds rightly that this inconsistency does not call in doubt either his interpretation of the passage or the Aristotelian origin of the ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά, as such a consistency of views is not attempted by Aristotle in the explanation of different passages, and is not to be expected in the problems, which frequently present several solutions of the same difficulty.

The second example of the ἔθος λέξεως also presents difficulty: καὶ χαλκίας τοὺς τὸν σίδηρον ἐργαζομένους (scil. φασὶν εἶναι), to which is joined the citation, ὅθεν πεποιήται “κνημὶς νεοτεύκτου κασσιτέροιο.” In our treatment of it we follow Vahlen.

The schol. (B) to T 283 have noted the popular usage of χαλκίας for workers in iron: δεδαῦγμένον ὀξεί χαλκῶ: παλαιὰ ἢ χρήσις τοῦ χαλκὸν ὀνομάζειν τὸν σίδηρον· ἀμέλει καὶ χαλκίας λέγομεν τοὺς τὸν σίδηρον ἐργαζομένους. One would expect in the application of this popular usage a passage, as the one just cited, in which χαλκός or χαλκεύς occurs in the sense mentioned. In the example cited by Aristotle, Φ 592, it is at first sight not clear in what the objection lay which is to be removed with the help of the ἔθος λέξεως. Yet, if one considers the passage in its connection—

ἦ ῥα, καὶ ὄξυν ἄκουτα βαρείης χειρὸς ἀφήκε, καὶ ῥ' ἔβαλε κνήμην ὑπὸ γούνατος, οὐδ' ἀφάμαρτεν.
ἀμφὶ δέ μιν κνημὶς νεοτεύκτου κασσιτέροιο σμερδαλέον κονάβησε· πάλιν δ' ἀπὸ χαλκὸς ὄρουσε βλημένου, οὐδ' ἐπέρησε—

the objection seems to consist in this: that it is odd for the softer metal of the greaves to ring under the blow of Agenor's brazen spear and for the bronze to rebound from a greave of new wrought tin. Accordingly, Aristotle does not take κασσιτέρος in its literal sense, but, just as χαλκεύς is used also of workers in iron, so too, by a custom of speech, one could speak of greaves of tin, though they were made of other metal, or at least not of pure tin.

Hence, by a λύσις κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως we are to understand an explanation of a disputed passage which appeals to popular usage, to the custom of speech, in the interpretation of the word or phrase that causes the difficulty.

This λύσις is mentioned in the Soph. El., iv, 166 a 17 ff., and is used in the scholia for the treatment of certain ἐπιτιμήματα—as, e. g.:

1. The ὑπεναντίον that Kalypso should mix nectar for Hermes if the gods drink only pure nectar, treated in schol. Por., ε 93, above quoted. Aristotle removes the difficulty by understanding 'κέρασσε' not in its literal sense, 'μίξαι,' but in a popular sense, 'ψιλῶς ἐγχέαι.'

2. The ἄλογον found in A 62, ἀλλ' ἄγε δὴ τινα μάντιν ἐρείομεν ἢ ἱερῆα, in seeking to enquire from a priest concerning future events, as priests were not seers, λύεται . . . ἐκ τῆς λέξεως· τὸν γὰρ νῦν λεγόμενον θύτην ἱερέα φαίνονται καλοῦντες πάλαι, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐτέρωθεν (Ω 220), schol. Por., A 62 f.

Cf. schol. Por., η 54 f., and η 64 f.

XII. Ποσαχῶς ἂν σημήνειε or Ὅμωνυμία, i. e., a solution by an appeal to the various possibilities of meaning in a word.¹

After his treatment of κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως, Aristotle continues: δεῖ δὲ καὶ ὅταν ὄνομά τι ὑπεναντίωμά τι δοκῆ σημαίνειν, ἐπισκοπεῖν ποσαχῶς ἂν σημήνειε τοῦτο ἐν τῷ εἰρημένῳ, οἷον τὸ "τῇ ῥ' ἔσχετο χάλκεον ἔγχος," τὸ ταύτη κωλυθῆναι ποσαχῶς ἐνδέχεται ὡδί, ἢ ὡς μάλιστα ἂν τις ὑπόλαβοι· κατὰ τὴν καταντικρὺ ἢ ὡς Γλαύκων λέγει, κ. τ. λ., 1461 a 31 ff.

This signifies that, if a word causes some inconsistency, one is to examine the various possibilities of meaning in the word or abide by one's first conception of it. The verse cited is from T 267 ff., and the objection indicated can be best understood from the connection:

¹ Cf. Vahlen, Adn., p. 227, Beitr., p. 375.

οὐδὲ τότε Ἀινείαιο δαΐφρονος ὄβριμον ἔγχος ῥῆξε σάκος · χρυσὸς γὰρ ἐρύκακε, δῶρα θεοῖο · ἀλλὰ δύο μὲν ἔλασσε διὰ πτύχας, αἱ δ' ἄρ' ἔτι τρεῖς ἦσαν, ἐπεὶ πέντε πτύχας ἤλασε κυλλοποδίων, τὰς δύο χαλκείας, δύο δ' ἐνδοθι κασσιτέριοι, τὴν δὲ μίαν χρυσέην, τῇ ῥ' ἔσχετο μείλινον ἔγχος.

Porphyry, in a lengthy scholium to this passage, presents various attempts at solution. The difficulty, according to the scholia, originates in this, that one starts out from the supposition that the gold plate was the outermost one, which would cause τῇ ῥ' ἔσχετο μείλινον ἔγχος to be inconsistent with what has preceded. Others give up this supposition, and situate the gold plate as the central of the five plates of which the shield was made; then it is easily understood how the lance, after it had broken through two plates, could make a halt at the third, the gold one. As this explanation results from a study of the various possibilities under which the ἔσχετο (= ἐκωλύθη) in that verse is to be understood, Vahlen considers it final and satisfactory. But this explanation does not remove the whole difficulty. τῇ ῥ' ἔσχετο may be understood as meaning 'stuck' or 'was fastened in it,' as the word clearly means in a similar passage, H 248 f. (where, however, it is used with the preposition ἐν):

ἔξ δὲ διὰ πτύχας ἦλθε δαΐζων χαλκὸς ἀπειρής ·
 ἐν τῇ δ' ἐβδομάτῃ ῥινῶ σῆξετο.

This sense, however, might lead to a manifest contradiction, for Homer says above not only that the gold stopped it—χρυσὸς γὰρ ἐρύκακε—but still more expressly that the spear penetrated two plates, etc.—ἀλλὰ δύο μὲν ἔλασσε διὰ πτύχας, αἱ δ' ἄρ' ἔτι τρεῖς—implying that the three remained unpierced. But the spear could not well be fixed or fastened in the gold plate, which was the third, without piercing it. Now, if a different sense of ἔσχετο, as 'stayed' or 'was held,' be understood, the contradiction is satisfactorily explained, and Aris-tote's suggestion—to examine the various possibilities of meaning in a word—has been successfully carried out.

Aristotle, in immediate connection with the above, characterizes under the name of Glaukon the precisely opposite methods of many critics, who jump at certain groundless conclusions and, assuming that the poet has said what they happen to think, find fault with anything which seems contrary to their own preconceived suppositions and notions. For example, the question about Ikarios has been treated in this fashion. The critics imagine he was a Lakedaimonian. They think it strange (ἄτοπον), therefore, that Telemachos, when he went to Lakedaimon, should not have met his grandfather. But, says Aristotle, the story of the Kephallenians may be the true one, who allege that Odysseus took a wife from among themselves and that her father was Ikadios, not Ikarios. So then, it is merely a mistake that gives plausibility to the objection. Thus Aristotle sets over against an arbitrary assumption another possibility which removes the occasion to censure the poet. The Ikarios incident was much discussed in antiquity, as is evident from schol. Por., δ 1 ff., schol., ο 16, etc.

Vahlen does not classify the foregoing, which may be briefly styled ποσαχῶς ἂν σημῆναι, as a λύσις, but regards it as the statement of a general principle of interpretation which, applied exclusively to ὑπεναντία, involves the six special λύσεις ἐκ τῆς λέξεως which have been just treated. At this point I have been unable to agree with Vahlen and I classify it as the seventh of the special λύσεις from the language and the twelfth and last λύσις of the chapter. My reasons for so doing are the following:

1. It proposes a method of solution which falls naturally under the head of λέξεις and which stands in marked distinction to the preceding six λύσεις. ἀμφιβολία is concerned with the variety of senses in two or more words from their grammatical connection; κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως regards merely a popular and, therefore, an irregular usage of a term; ποσαχῶς ἂν σημῆναι considers which of a variety of the natural senses of a word is the proper one in the disputed passage.

2. It is illustrated by an example as the eleven λύσεις already considered.

3. It corresponds in its sense and application to ὁμωνυμία, treated and illustrated in Soph. El., IV, 166 a 6 ff., as a λύσις from the language.

4. It is frequently employed in the scholia to explain difficulties, chiefly ὑπεναντία. So, e. g.,

1. Schol. Por., Ξ 434, where Ξάνθου δινηέντος, ὃν ἀθάνατος τέκετο Ζεὺς is considered ἐναντίον to Φ 195 f.: Ὁκεανοῖο, ἐξ οὗ περ πάντες ποταμοὶ καὶ πᾶσα θάλασσα. λύοιτο δ' ἄν, says the scholiast, ἐκ τῆς λέξεως καθ' ἑκάτερα· καὶ γὰρ . . . ποταμὸς ὁμωνύμως λέγεται ὅ τε θεὸς καὶ τὸ ρεῦμα, ὥστε τὸν μὲν θεὸν ἐκ Διὸς εἶναι, τὸ δὲ ρεῦμα ἐξ Ὁκεανοῦ.

2. Schol. Por., Z 488. The question was raised, how it is that the same poet who says that μοῖρα cannot be infringed—μοῖραν δ' οὐ τινά φημι πεφυγμένον ἔμμεναι ἀνδρῶν—yet implies in the Odyssey that it can be—ὥς καὶ νῦν Αἴγισθος ὑπὲρ μόρον Ἀτρεΐδαο γῆμ' ἄλοχον (a 35 f.), and is answered: λύεται δὲ τοῦτο ἐκ τοῦ δείκνυσθαι ὅτι τριχῶς ἡ μοῖρα παρὰ τῷ ποιητῇ λέγεται· ἡ εἰμαρμένη, ἡ μερίς καὶ τὸ καθῆκον . . . καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν οὖν προκειμένων ἐν μὲν τῷ “μοῖραν δ' οὐ τινά φημι πεφυγμένον ἔμμεναι ἀνδρῶν” τὴν εἰμαρμένην λέγει, ὅταν δὲ “ὥς καὶ νῦν Αἴγισθος ὑπὲρ μόρον,” οὐ τὸ σημαῖνον τὴν εἰμαρμένην λέγει, ἀλλὰ τὸ ὑπὲρ τὸ καθῆκον.

3. Schol. Por., B 2. Δία δ' οὐκ ἔχε νήδυμος ὕπνος seems ἐναντίον to Ζεὺς . . . ἐνθα καθεύδ' ἀναβάς (A 609 ff.). λύοιτο δ' ἄν, says the scholiast, κατὰ λέξιν· καὶ γὰρ τὸ καθεύδειν ἐνίοτε δηλοῖ τὴν ψιλὴν κατάκλισιν ἐπὶ τῆς εὐνῆς, κ. τ. λ.

See further schol. Por., A 3, Z 265, Ξ 200 for ὑπεναντία; A 211, B 8 for ἀπρεπή.

Under ποσαχῶς ἄν σημῆνυε are to be classified certain cases where ὁμωνυμία is appealed to in the explanations of contradictions arising from a coincidence in the names of Homeric characters. The incident of Pylaimenes is a famous one, who is slain in E 576, but yet reappears in N 658, following the corpse of his son Harpalion on its way to sacred Ilium. The scholium Por., E 576, explains as follows: . . . ἡ δὲ λύσις ἀπὸ τῆς λέξεως · καὶ γὰρ ὁ Πυλαιμένης ὁμόνυμος εἶναι δύναται, κ. τ. λ. . . ἔνιοι τοῦτον (N 643, 658) ἐνόμιζον εἶναι τὸν ἐν τῷ E ἀναιρεθέντα. “ἐνθα Πυλαιμένεα ἐλέτην ἀτάλαντον Ἄρηι ἀρχὸν Παφλαγόνων.” ἔστιν οὖν ὁμωνυμία, ἐκείνου μὲν ἄρχοντος ὄντος, τούτου δὲ βασιλέως. πολλαὶ γὰρ παρὰ τῷ ποιητῇ ὁμωνυμίαι, κ. τ. λ.¹

Further, in schol. Por., H 9, the poet is accused of contradicting himself in calling Nestor the oldest of the Achaians (A 250), and yet representing Menestheus as the older of the two by two generations (H 8 ff.). He is said to be the son of Areithoos, surnamed Korynetes, and from Nestor's account of the latter's armor (H 124–160), it is considered impossible for his son to be younger than Nestor: . . . ἡ δὲ λύσις ἀπὸ τῆς λέξεως · ὁμόνυμος γὰρ πατὴρ υἱῷ, καὶ ὅταν φησὶν (H 138) ὁ κορυνήτης, οὐ τὸν Μενέσθιον λέγει ἀλλὰ τὸν Ἀρηίθοον τὸν Μενεσθίου πατέρα, ὥστε εἶναι τὸν κορυνήτην πάππον τοῦ Μενεσθίου.

IV.

The remaining section of the chapter (1461 b 10–21), beginning ὅλως δέ, contains general observations on the proper treatment of the various ἐπιτιμήματα.

In general, proceeds Aristotle, τὸ ἀδύνατον is to be referred (1) to the End of Poetry (πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν²), which is illus-

¹ As an evidence that explanations of this difficulty were sought prior to the time of Aristarchos, see Aristonikos (Dind., schol. II., I, p. 133): οὗτος οὗτος ἐστὶ Πυλαιμένης περὶ οὗ πολλοὶ τῶν ἀρχαίων ἐζητήκασιν.

Kammer (Burs. Jahresb., 1878, S. 71) does not accept the view of A. Schimberg, Analecta Aristarchea, diss. Gryphisw., 1878, who tries to show that Aristarchos made a collection of homonyms in Homer and wrote a special treatise σύγγραμμα περὶ Πυλαιμένων to account for this discrepancy. Zenodotos wrote, in N 658, Κυλαιμένεα for Πυλαιμένεα (Dind., II., I, p. 1; Eustath., 953, 29) to avoid the discrepancy.

² In my conception of πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν, I agree with Butcher, p. 157². Vahlen (p. 379 f.) maintains that ἀδύνατον πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν is a generic trated below by the observation, πρὸς τε γὰρ τὴν ποίησιν αἰρετώτερον πιθανὸν ἀδύνατον ἢ ἀπίθανον καὶ δυνατὸν (cf. c. xxiv, 1460 a 27); or (2) to Poetic Truth (πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον) (cf. p. 30), illustrated by the observation, τοιούτους εἶναι οἶον Ζεῦξις ἔγραφεν, ἀλλὰ βέλτιον· τὸ γὰρ παράδειγμα δεῖ ὑπερέχειν; or (3) to Popular Belief (πρὸς τὴν δόξαν) (cf. p. 31).

Τὸ ἄλογον is to be referred (1) to Popular Belief (πρὸς ἃ φασιν τᾶλλογα); or (2) is to be explained thus: that an ἄλογον does not always violate reason, as 'it is probable that a thing may happen contrary to probability.'

Next occurs an observation for the treatment of contradictions: τὰ δ' ὑπεναντία ὡς εἰρημένα (scil. ἐστὶν) οὕτω σκοπεῖν ὥσπερ οἱ ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἔλεγχοι (sc. σκοποῦσιν) εἰ τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ πρὸς τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ ὡσαύτως, ὥστε καὶ αὐτὸν (sc. τὸν ποιητὴν δεῖ σκοπεῖν) ἢ πρὸς ἃ αὐτὸς λέγει ἢ ὃ ἂν φρόνιμος ὑποθῆται, 1461 b 15–19.¹

The meaning of τὸ ὑπεναντίον has been already considered (p. 21 f.). In the treatment of contradictions in poetry, says Aristotle, one should observe the same procedure as is applied to ἔλεγχοι in Dialectic. In this, in order to establish whether the ἔλεγχος is actually an ἔλεγχος, one must enquire whether the ἀντίφασις which the ἔλεγχος contains applies to the same object and holds in the same relation and in the same way and manner, and in other respects as indicated by Soph. El., 181 a 3: τοῖς δὲ παρὰ τὸν ὀρισμὸν γινομένοις τοῦ ἐλέγχου . . . ἀπαντητέον σκοποῦσι τὸ συμπέρασμα πρὸς τὴν ἀντίφασιν, description of the objection, for the removal of which two λύσεις are mentioned, (1) πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον, (2) πρὸς τὴν δόξαν. To this view I offer the following objections: (1) πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν, as we have seen (p. 29), aptly expresses the general principle of poetic imitation, and therefore may properly be classed with the End of Poetry, the first λύσις; (2) "πρὸς τὴν ποίησιν for κατὰ τὴν ποίησιν (see 1460 b 15 ff.) would be strange, and, side by side with πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον and πρὸς τὴν δόξαν in a different sense of the preposition, scarcely conceivable;" (3) if it were meant to be understood with ἀδύνατον, it would hardly be used alone in the clause below, πρὸς τε γὰρ τὴν ποίησιν αἰρετώτερον, κ. τ. λ.

¹See Vahlen, Adn., p. 233; Beitr., p. 384 ff.

ὅπως ἔσται τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ κατὰ τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ πρὸς τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ ὡσαύτως καὶ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ χρόνῳ. Cf. 167 a 26 and 170 a 7.

Just as in sophistical refutations, therefore, so in the treatment of poetic contradictions it should be examined 'whether the same thing is meant' 'in the same relation' and in the same sense. And contradictions are said to be of two sorts, contradictions in statements expressly made by the poet himself (πρὸς ἃ αὐτὸς λέγει) and contradictions to the tacit assumption which a person of intelligence naturally makes (< scil. πρὸς > ὃ ἂν φρόνιμος ὑποθῆται).¹ "As in ethics Aristotle assumes a man of moral insight (ὁ φρόνιμος), to whose trained judgment the appreciation of ethical questions is submitted, and who, in the last resort, becomes 'the standard and the law' of right," so too here a person of sound intelligence is assumed who is to judge whether discrepancies exist in the poetic narration, though the poet may not in so many words contradict himself. Vahlen compares with the whole thought Soph. El., xv, 174 b 19: καθάπερ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ῥητορικοῖς καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἐλεγκτικοῖς ὁμοίως τὰ ἐναντιώματα θεωρητέον ἢ πρὸς τὰ ὑφ' ἑαυτοῦ λεγόμενα ἢ πρὸς οὓς ὁμολογεῖ καλῶς λέγειν ἢ πράττειν, ἔτι πρὸς τοὺς δοκοῦντας τοιοῦτους ἢ πρὸς τοὺς ὁμοίους, κ. τ. λ.

Both Teichmüller² and Vahlen connect the lines under consideration with the six λύσεις ἐκ τῆς λέξεως and the observation ποσαχῶς ἂν σημῆναι, κ. τ. λ., which we have adopted as a λύσις. Vahlen goes so far as to say: "Kurz die verschiedenen Wege der Einzellösung mit Hülfe des sprachlichen Ausdrucks und dessen Erklärung lassen sich wohl unter den allgemeinen zusammenfassenden Gesichtspunkt unterbringen der für die ὑπεναντία an dieser Stelle bezeichnet wird." That this view is extreme is very obvious. The λύσεις from the language, as is shown by the scholia (see p. 40), are by no means restricted to the treatment of contradictions. Moreover, they arrive at solutions by the study of special words or phrases, while the present observation calls for a study of the relations of the passages seemingly contradictory, so that one may have an accurate appreciation of the situation in each case, of the thought expressed, etc., etc. In fact, the similarity between the suggestion here offered and the observation περὶ τοῦ καλῶς ἢ μὴ καλῶς, which Vahlen falsely recognizes as one of the twelve λύσεις (see p. 37¹), is far more striking than its resemblance to the λύσεις from the language.

¹ As an example of a ὑπεναντίον < πρὸς > ὃ ἂν φρόνιμος ὑποθῆται, I would cite schol. Por., γ 329: μάχεται τῷ μὴ κατεiléχθαι Καύκωνας ἐν τῷ καταλόγῳ τὸ "ἐνθα δὲ Καύκωνες πόλεμον μέτα θωρήσσοντο," κ. τ. λ.

² Teichmüller, p. 162 f.; Vahlen, p. 383 ff.

Hence it is wrong to regard these lines as merely a summary of something which has been said, as a reduction of the λύσεις ἐκ τῆς λέξεως to a comprehensive point of view. It is rather the supplementing of methods of solution previously stated, in so far as they are applicable to ὑπεναντία, by a general principle of interpretation for the treatment of contradictions. The truth of this is evinced by the fact that this principle of interpretation—namely, study the setting, the relations, the sense of the passages to see whether the alleged contradiction is actually a contradiction—is the basis of certain explanations in the scholia, as the following citations show:

1. Schol. Por., Γ 276 (fr. 148, ed. Teubn.): διὰ τί βουλόμενος ἐπιωρκῆσαι τοὺς Τρῶας ὁ ποιητής, ἵνα εὐλόγως ἀπόλωνται, οὐδαμοῦ πεποιήκεν ἐπιωρκούντας ἀλλ' οἶεται; ὁ γὰρ ὄρκος ἦν, εἰ Ἀλέξανδρον ἀποκτείνειεν ὁ Μενέλαος, ἀποδοθῆναι τὴν Ἑλένην· οὐκ ἀναιρεθέντος δὲ οὐδαμοῦ ἠδίκουν μὴ ἀποδιδόντες οὐδ' ἐπιώρκησαν. φησὶ δ' Ἀριστοτέλης, ὅτι οὐδ' ὁ ποιητής λέγει ὡς ἐπιώρκησαν, καθάπερ ἐπ' ἄλλων· “ὡς φάτο καὶ ῥ' ἐπιώρκον ὤμοσεν” (K 332), ἀλλ' ὅτι κατάρτοι ἦσαν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἑαυτοῖς κατηράσαντο εἰπόντες· “Ζεῦ κύνδιστε μέγιστε καὶ ἀθάνατοι θεοὶ ἄλλοι, ὀππότεροι πρότεροι ὑπὲρ ὄρκια πημήνεια, ὧδέ σφ' ἐγκέφαλος χαμάδις ῥέοι ὡς ὄδε οἶνος” (Γ 298–300). οὐκ ἐπιώρκησαν μὲν οὖν, ἐκακούργησαν δὲ καὶ ἔβλαψαν τοὺς ὄρκους· ἐπάρατοι οὖν ἦσαν. ταῦτά τοι καὶ Ἡρα πειράται, κ. τ. λ.

2. Schol. Por., Δ 2: The poet is accused of making contradictory statements in representing Ganymede as cup-bearer of the gods in one passage (Τ 234) and in another having Hebe perform that service (Δ 2): . . . οὐκοῦν λύσομεν ὀνόματι καὶ λέξει, ὅτι οὐχὶ τῶν θεῶν ἀλλὰ τοῦ Διὸς αὐτὸν οἴνοχόου ἀποφαίνει—ἔχει γὰρ ἡ λέξις οὕτως· “τὸν καὶ ἀνηρείψαντο θεοὶ Διὶ οἴνοχοεῖν” (Τ 234)—ἡ δὲ Ἡβη τοῖς θεοῖς οἴνοχοεῖ, evidently Porphyry's own.

3. Schol. Por., B 844: That Akamas and Peiroos are mentioned as leaders of the Thracians (B 844) is taken as contradictory with Λ 221, which intimates that Iphidamas was their king: . . . ἡ δὲ λύσις ἐκ τῆς λέξεως· οὐ γὰρ οἱ περὶ τὸν Ἀκάμαντα πάντας τοὺς Θρακῆας ἄγουσιν, ἀλλῶς τε ἐπεὶ εἶρηκεν “ὄσσους Ἑλλησποντος ἀγάρροος ἐντὸς ἔεργει,” ὥστε τῶν ἐκτὸς Θρακῶν καὶ τὸν Ῥῆσον καὶ τὸν Ἰφιδάμαντα δύνασθαι βασιλεύοντας ὕστερον εἶναι βοηθούς.

See further schol. Por., B 848, Φ 388 ff., γ 147, ζ 221, ρ 291, etc.

There follows a general observation on ἀλογία and μοχθηρία, which are only justified when poetic necessity requires their presence (1461 b 19–21). This has been already mentioned, pp. 20, 21.

Thus it seems evident that the twenty-fifth chapter of the Poetics and the ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά of Aristotle and his followers are worthy of more consideration than has heretofore been accorded them. The woof of the former is so closely woven into the warp of the Poetics that it is simply impossible to deny its right to be recognized as an important section of this great work on the philosophy of art. And the latter, so far from being merely relics of Peripatetic wit and ingenuity, must be considered, in many cases, serious attempts to meet on aesthetic principles difficulties suggested by learned critics. Hence the Aristotelian element of the Homeric scholia, probably larger than has usually been recognized, may prove of service for the solution of many of the difficult problems suggested by the Poetics.

This chapter, in a word, may be said to contain the elements of a systematic treatment of the faults of poetry and of the so-called inconsistencies of Homer. Of these two themes, which demand an aesthetic rather than a philological treatment, I hope to speak in another paper; in this preliminary study I have hardly broken the ground for an adequate consideration of them.

SYNOPSIS OF ARISTO'

Λύσ

- | | | |
|---|--------------|---|
| I. ἡ ὀρθότης τῆς ποιητικῆς τέχνης...
(1460 b 13 ff.) | ..... | περὶ δὲ τοῦ καλῶς ἢ μὴ καλῶς, κ.τ.
(1460 a 4 ff.)
(which involves λύσεις (1) and (3).) |
| II. μιμητῆς ὁ ποιητῆς...
(1460 b 8 ff.) | ..... | 3. οἷα εἶναι δεῖ οι
(1460 b 11, b 33). 4. οἷά φασιν καὶ δοκεῖ οι
(1460 b 10, b 35). 5. οἷα ἦν ἢ ἔστιν οι
(1460 b 10, 1461 a 2). |
| III. ταῦτα δ' ἐξαγγέλλεται λέξει
(1460 b 11 ff.) | οι | ἐκ τῆς λέξεως..... |

πρὸς τὴν ποιήσιν..... (1461 b 9.)	{	a. ἀδύνατα (1460 b 23).
		b. ἄλογα (1461 b 21).
		c. βλαβερά (1461 b 21).
		d. ἀνώμαλα.
1. ἐκ τοῦ προσώπου.....	{	a. ἄλογα.
		b. ὑπεναντία.
		c. ἀπρεπῆ.
2. ἐκ τοῦ καιροῦ.....	{	a. ἄλογα.
		b. ὑπεναντία.
		c. ἀπρεπῆ.
		d. ἀδύνατα.
		e. ἄτοπα.
		f. ἀσύμφορα.
πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον..... (1461 b 10.)		ἀδύνατα (1461 b 10, 1460 b 33).
πρὸς τὴν δόξαν..... (1461 b 10.)	{	a. ἀδύνατα (1461 b 10).
		b. ἄλογα (1461 b 14).
		c. ἀπρεπῆ (cf. 1460 b 36).
ἐκ τοῦ ἔθους.....	{	a. ἀδύνατα.
		b. ἀπρεπῆ.
		c. ὑπεναντία.
		d. ἄτοπα.
6. γλώττη (1461 a 10.)	{	a. ἀπρεπῆ.
		b. ὑπεναντία.
7. κατὰ μεταφοράν..... (1461 a 16.)	{	a. ὑπεναντία.
		b. ἀδύνατα.
8. κατὰ προσωδίαν..... (1461 a 22.)	{	a. ἀπρεπῆ.
		b. ἄτοπα.
9. διαιρέσει..... (1461 a 24.)		ὑπεναντία.
10. ἀμφιβολία..... (1461 a 25.)		ὑπεναντία.
11. κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς λέξεως..... (1461 a 27.)	{	a. ὑπεναντία.
		b. ἄλογα.
12. ποσαχῶς ἂν σημήνιει οἱ ὁμωνυμία..... (1461 a 32.)	{	a. ὑπεναντία.
		b. ἀπρεπῆ.

INDEX OF HOMERIC REFERENCES.

	PAGE.			PAGE.
Iliad, A 1.....	11		Iliad, Γ 236.....	14 ¹ , 16, 20, 29
A 3.....	22 ¹ , 40, 54		Γ 276.....	23, 44, 58
A 31.....	26, 39, 40		Γ 281.....	33
A 42.....	26, 33 ² , 38, 40		Γ 298.....	58
A 50.....	11 ³ , 41		Γ 315.....	21, 40
A 52.....	22 ¹		Γ 365.....	21, 40
A 62.....	20, 40, 41, 51		Γ 379.....	20, 33, 40
A 144.....	44		Γ 397.....	19
A 169.....	25		Δ 2.....	33, 38, 39, 40, 58, 59
A 194.....	22 ¹		Δ 3.....	49
A 211.....	25, 26, 40, 54		Δ 4.....	25, 26
A 250.....	55		Δ 105.....	20, 40, 45
A 399.....	20		Δ 297.....	26 ¹ , 33, 40
A 420.....	20, 40		Δ 491.....	20, 40
A 424.....	44		E 7.....	11 ³ , 19, 33, 40, 45
B 1.....	42		E 20.....	11 ³
B 2.....	54		E 341.....	20, 40, 49
B 8.....	25, 26, 33, 40, 54		E 576.....	22 ¹ , 23, 45, 55
B 15.....	46		E 741.....	21, 22 ¹ , 23, 45
B 73.....	26 ¹		E 778.....	26, 40
B 82.....	26, 40		Z 129.....	26 ¹
B 183.....	26		Z 234.....	26, 40
B 266.....	22 ¹		Z 265.....	22 ¹ , 33 ² , 37, 38, 38 ¹ , 54
B 391.....	42 ³		Z 488.....	22 ¹ , 38, 38 ¹ , 54
B 448.....	45		H 9.....	20, 21 ¹ , 40, 55
B 649.....	14 ¹ , 16, 22, 22 ¹ , 26 ¹ , 33 ² , 38, 38 ¹ , 44		H 93.....	36
B 827.....	33		H 124.....	55
B 844.....	22 ¹ , 40, 59		H 229.....	33 ² , 37
B 848.....	22 ¹ , 39, 40, 59		H 248.....	52
Γ 121.....	21, 38, 40
Γ 144.....	20, 40

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Iliad, Θ 555.....	20, 40	Iliad, Π 125.....	45
I 167.....	26 ¹	Σ 22.....	11 ³
I 186.....	26, 40	Σ 125.....	26 ¹
I 203.....	11 ³ , 26, 33, 40, 41	Σ 245.....	26 ¹
I 357.....	25	Σ 489.....	31, 45, 47
I 453.....	26 ¹ , 39, 40	T 62.....	47
I 591.....	26 ¹ , 40	T 108.....	26 ¹ , 31
I 619.....	25	T 283.....	50
I 682.....	15	Υ 67.....	25, 26, 31, 40
K 11.....	20, 33, 42, 45	Υ 234.....	22 ¹ , 38, 49, 59
K 152.....	32	Υ 267.....	22 ¹ , 51
K 194.....	32, 50	Υ 329.....	39
K 252.....	15, 45 ¹ , 48	Φ 140.....	39
K 274.....	11 ² , 14 ¹	Φ 196.....	44, 54
K 316.....	41	Φ 252.....	47
K 332.....	58	Φ 388.....	22 ¹ , 59
K 447.....	20, 33	Φ 592.....	50
K 561.....	22 ¹	X 36.....	14 ¹
Λ 405.....	26, 40	X 105.....	28
M 25.....	21, 38, 40	X 147.....	22 ¹
M 321.....	47	X 165.....	16, 26 ¹
N 521.....	26 ¹	X 205.....	14 ¹ , 19, 28
N 643.....	55	Ψ 71.....	38
N 658.....	55	Ψ 94.....	47
Ξ 1.....	26 ¹	Ψ 269.....	33
Ξ 200.....	22 ¹ , 54	Ψ 328.....	46
Ξ 304.....	43, 44	Ω 15.....	33
Ξ 434.....	38, 38 ¹ , 40, 44, 54	Ω 221.....	26 ¹
O 189.....	40, 44	Ω 527.....	21, 26 ¹ , 38
O 193.....	44	Ω 559.....	24
O 348.....	42 ³	Odyssey, α 284.....	20
Π 7.....	26 ¹	β 51.....	14 ¹
Π 25.....	26 ¹	β 63.....	14 ¹
Π 140.....	14 ¹
Π 152.....	26 ¹

	PAGE.
Odyssey, γ 20.....	40
γ 72.....	26, 33
γ 147.....	40, 59
δ 1.....	21, 53
ϵ 93.....	49, 51
ϵ 334.....	14 ¹ , 47
ζ 106.....	14 ¹ , 47
ζ 221.....	20, 33, 40, 59
ζ 244.....	26, 38
η 54.....	40, 51
η 64.....	40, 51
η 258.....	37
θ 63.....	38 ¹
θ 78.....	26
θ 100.....	26 ¹
θ 564.....	21, 33 ^a , 37
ι 5.....	26, 38, 40
ι 25.....	40
ι 60.....	11 ^s
ι 106.....	26, 26 ¹ , 40
ι 240.....	21
ι 275.....	38 ¹

	PAGE.
Odyssey, κ 103.....	33
κ 176.....	47
κ 190.....	21
λ 239.....	22 ¹ , 47
λ 489.....	26, 33 ^a , 38, 40
μ 3.....	26 ¹ , 38 ¹
μ 128.....	16
μ 374.....	37, 39, 40, 44
ν 119.....	26 ¹
\omicron 16.....	53
\omicron 119.....	20
π 188.....	37
ρ 291.....	59
τ 174.....	22, 44
τ 467.....	26 ¹
χ 412.....	21, 38, 40
ω 1.....	21
ω 192.....	26

INDEX OF SUBJECTS.

- Accidental, the, 29.
ἀδύνατα, 19 f., 19¹, 31, 33, 40, 55.
ἔλογα, 19, 20 f., 28, 31, 33, 38, 40.
ἀμφιβολία, 48, 53.
ἀνώμαλον, τό, 24 f.
ἀπορήματα Ὀμηρικά, 13, 13², 16¹, 24, 50, 59.
ἀπρεπές, τό, 25 f., 25¹, 38, 40.
 Aristotle, and the Early Criticism of Homer, 10 ff., admiration for Homer, 12², relation to προβλήματα and λύσεις, 13⁴.
ἀσύμφορον, τό, 26, 40.
ἄτοπον, τό, 26¹, 33, 40.
- βέλτιον*, πρὸς τὸ, 30, 30³, 55², 56.
βλαβερὰ, 21, 33.
- Chamaileon, 14, 14¹.
 Correctness, artistic, in poetry, 18, 28.
 Custom, 31.
- γλώττη, 41.
- διαίρεσει*, 46.
δόξαν, πρὸς τήν, 31, 55², 56.
- ἔθος* τῆς λέξεως, κατὰ τὸ, 48 f., 53.
ἔθους, ἐκ τοῦ, 31 ff.
εἶδη λέξεως, 18.
εἶ τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ πρὸς τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ ὡσαύτως, κ. τ. λ., 56 f.
 End of Poetry, 28 f., 37¹, 55².
ἐνστατικοί and λοτικοί, 11³.
ἐπιτιμήματα, 18 ff., 19¹, 28.
- Euripides, 30, 30¹.
- ζητήματα*, Ὀμηρικά, of Porphyry, 14 f., 14².
- Herakleides, 14, 14¹, 20.
 Herakleitos, 10.
 Hippias, 11.
 Homeric Question, 10.
- θαυμαστόν*, τό, 28, 28¹.
- Ikarios, 53.
- καλῶς*, 34.
καλῶς, περὶ δὲ τοῦ, κ. τ. λ., 33 ff.
καιροῦ, ἐκ τοῦ, 39 f.
κατὰ τὸ εἶκος ἢ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον, 19, 32, 35 f.
- λέξεως*, ἐκ τῆς, 40 ff.
- Means of representation, 17, 40.
 Megakleides, 14, 14¹.
μεταφορὰν, κατὰ, 42 ff.
μίμησις, 18, 29.
- Objects of representation, 17, 30.
οἷα εἶναι δεῖ, 17, 30.
οἷα ἦν ἢ ἔστιν, 17, 31 ff.
οἷα φασιν καὶ δοκεῖ, 17, 31.
δμωνυμία, 51 f., 54.
ὀρθότης τῆς τέχνης, 18, 18¹.
ὀρθότητα, παρὰ τήν, τ. κ. τέχνην, 23 f.
ὄτε, 37.

ὅτι ἢ οὐ ἔνεκεν, 37.

πάντες ἀντὶ <τοῦ> πολλοί, 43 ff.

Peripatetics, 14.

Philosophers, 10.

Plato, 10, 14, 15², 21, 25.

Poetic Truth, 30, 56.

ποίησιν, πρὸς τήν, 29, 55, 55².

Popular Belief, 31, 56.

Porphyry, 10, 14, 14², 15, 15², 16.

ποσαχῶς ἀν σημήμεναι, 51 ff.

πράττοντα ἢ λέγοντα, τὸν, 33, 33², 38.

προβλήματα Ὀμηρικά, 10, 13, 13^{4, 5, 6}, 16.

πρὸς ὄν, 33², 37, 38.

προσφθίαν, κατὰ, 45.

προσώπου, ἐκ τοῦ, 38, 38¹.

Protagoras, 11, 29.

Pylaimenes, 54 f., 55¹.

Real Events, 31.

Sophists, 11, 11¹.

Sophokles, 30, 30¹.

σπουδαῖον ἢ φαῦλον, 34 f., 34¹.

συμβεβηκός, κατὰ, 18, 23, 29.

ὑπεναντία, 21 ff., 22¹, 33, 38, 38¹, 40, 47, 56 f.

Xenophanes, 10.

Zeno, 12, 15.

Zoilos, 11, 11².

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

